Graziers Learn 'Maximum Management' Techniques At Conference

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Careful management, agreed speakers at the Southeast Pennsylvania Grazing Conference, is the key to a successful, profitable grassland operation.

The conference brought together producers and speakers to exchange ideas during the two-day event at the Solanco fairgrounds.

In its eighth year, the conference attracted approximately 200 people for the educational event sponsored by the Lancaster County Graziers.

Cove Mountain Farm

Glen Moyer, Cove Mountain Farm, Mercersburg, Franklin County chose to try operating a grass-based farm because of financial reasons. In 1996 Moyer took up the challenge to develop a seasonal dairy farm from the ground up on a farm willed to American Farmland Trust. Of the farm's 300 acres, 200 of the acres are in grass.

Last year Moyer and his family milked 118 cows.

Having begun with registered Holsteins, Moyer was introduced to the Jersey breed by a neighbor and over time has added Jerseys to his crossbreeding program. "We're definitely into color. It's not all black and white."

To make a lane for the cows, he topped an old diversion terrace with loose gravel. Moyer feeds his herd round bales with an unroller.

Cove Mountain Farm weathered a tough lesson and was introduced to its "number one challenge" with an endophyte fescue problem. Irrigating the pasture too late, said Moyer, allowed the fescue to grow while leaving other plants dormant. The endophyte problem, estimates Moyer, has affected production, body condition, and even reproductive efficiency.

The seasonal setup means that the Moyer family milks from approximately early March to early or middle January.

Additional information, on grass-based farming systems and Cove Mountain Farm is available at Grassfarmer.com.

The Strite Family

Pastoring a church and raising four homeschooled boys helped to put Harry Strite, Williamsport, Md., on a mission for a lower-stress, less time-intensive way to farm.

Besides the Ayrshires, Strite's crossbreeding program includes Holsteins, Normandes and Dutch Belt cattle. The "rainbow herd" also includes New Zealand genetics and even Guernsey and Jersey cattle, besides recently-purchased Linebacks.

Once the calves are big enough to go out on a pasture, they are introduced to the "calf-mobile."

Inspired by the "chicken-mobile," this setup, 50 feet square, is constructed of two-by-

The Pennsylvania Junior Holstein Association recently conducted its 2001 state convention at the Radisson Hotel, West Middlesex. Distinguished junior member contest winners include, from left to right, Christopher Vanco, Sarah Day, Scott Walton, Megan Schantz, Jason Troutman, and Melissa Schuler. See photo essay on page A28.

Calvin Ernst plants about 2,000 acres, which are divided among five townships and spread throughout a 15-mile radius. All of the plots are in Crawford County. Ernst spends his time cultivating what most farmers try to destroy in their fields — what most of us label as common weeds. With more than 2,000 acres in production, Ernst Conservation Seeds markets the seeds and cuttings of about 200 different native perennials, which he sells to anyone who wants to return land to its natural state. Photo by Sandy Bradley

They're Not Weeds, But 'Conservation Seeds'

SANDY BRADLEY
Crawford Co. Correspondent

MEADVILLE (Crawford Co.) — Although Calvin Ernst is a farmer, he doesn't raise livestock or animal feed. Although his clients are people, he doesn't raise produce for human consumption.

And, while Ernst can be called progressive, his success isn't based on new technology.

To many people's surprise, Ernst spends his time cultivating what most farmers try to destroy in their fields — what most of us label as common weeds.

With more than 2,000 acres in production, Ernst Conservation Seeds markets the seeds and cuttings of about 200 different native perennials, which he sells to anyone who wants to return land to its natural state.

"We're a telephone-based industry," he said of his mail-order business. "We have five lines and three girls answering phones. We try to service from Indiana to North Carolina and up into the Maritime provinces. That's where our seeds are adapted to. Kentucky and Tennessee are pretty good — all the way up to Maine and Canada. We sell to seed companies or individuals. We have a network of distributors and direct sales.

"This product never goes to the retail sales," he said. "We sell more to the restoration range of people like the contractors that want to restore really bad strip mines and wetlands and stuff like that. Nothing that a Wal-Mart would sell. (As far as) the Wal-Mart stuff — people want to see something bloom right away. Ours is perennial and takes several years to establish. Our stuff is a native ecotype and will be there for 50 years if established and maintained right.

"But we do sell to a lot of golf courses that want out-of-play areas like with the native grasses, asters, goldenrods, and things like that. If they want to have butterfly or bluebird habitats — and want to quit mowing — that's the kind of thing that we do well."

Ernst earned an agronomy degree in 1963 from Penn State, and he planted his first commercial crop in 1962, a five-acre plot on his parents' farm consisting mostly of crowned vetch.

Northeast Broiler Fryer Parts Part I

ATLANTA, GA.
February 15, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

Trucklot buying interest remained light and unaggressive as dealers kept floorstocks as closely balanced as possible. Offerings of boneless skinless breasts were readily available, however, bone-in breasts were generally balanced. Drums and thighs were at least sufficient, and wings were adequate. Distributive channels saw better movement today where brisk holiday movement through restaurant lines was a factor. The market tone remained fully steady on bone-in breasts, no better than steady on boneless skinless breasts, about steady on the balance.

Chore-Tronics™ CONTROLS
The Simple Solution

Chore-Tronics™ Controls give you the competitive edge. The Chore-Tronics™ Line of controls was developed specifically to meet today's management challenges. Improvements in individual systems, genetics, and nutrition still offer production advances, but these may not offer enough of an edge in today's competitive market. Properly integrated house management using Chore-Tronics Controls for the ultimate in flexibility and precision offers the greatest potential for a competitive advantage.

Chore-Time's brooders and heaters provide a reliable, low-maintenance source of heat for young birds as well as for use during cool times.

Chore-Time's new MODEL C2® PLUS Broiler Feeding System gets birds off to a good start, minimizes wasted feed, and provides birds with consistent access to fresh feed. The latest in Chore-Time's 45-year history of outstanding broiler feeding systems, the MODEL C2® PLUS includes a reinforced pan eating area and cone wear surface. This may be Chore-Time's most durable broiler feeder yet.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

FEBRUARY 19–25, 2001

NEW MOON, FEBRUARY 23

"I CANNOT TELL A LIE..."

As any American schoolchild might tell you, George Washington chopped down a cherry tree, then admitted his wrongdoing by saying to his father, "I cannot tell a lie." Except that he didn't say it Not only did he not say that, he didn't even chop down the tree. One of Washington's biographers made up the story, hoping to demonstrate Washington's honesty The cherry tree tale is not the only myth about Washington. Those wooden dentures? They weren't made of wood. Worse, they were made of cow's teeth, human teeth, and elephant ivory, all embedded in a foundation of lead And lest you think that Washington threw a silver dollar across the Potomac, keep in mind that there were no silver dollars when he was young. Not to mention that the Potomac is over a mile wide

He is the purest figure in history.

–English statesman William E Gladstone (1809-1898) referring to George Washington

Lancaster Farming

OPINION

The Pennsylvania House of Representatives has approved legislation that eliminates the cap on the amount of state money counties can spend to preserve farmland. The measure proposes to eliminate the cap of $10,000 per acre on the use of state farmland preservation money. The thinking is that some areas of the state have high land values, and this limit is making it difficult for preservation programs to purchase conservation easements.

We agree that to let the local county determine what is reasonable to pay for farmland is good. Yet we can't help but use the Lancaster Farmland Trust and the Lancaster County Preserve Board as examples of frugality in these matters. These organizations with their exceptional record of the use of financial planning to preserve farmland in "high priced" Lancaster County is the talk of the nation. We have a report this week that the Trust alone has just approved a record making eleven more farms for preservation at its February meeting.

There are two things to be considered when you pay more than $10,000 an acre for easements against development. The high-priced land may be in an area where farming is no longer practical because it is enclosed by development. So it is simply open space disguised as farmland. Secondly, if you put so much money into one farm, a lot fewer real farms can be preserved.

Even good programs need strong fiscal management to be effective and good use of both public and private money.

Now Is The Time

To Use ATV's Safely

ATV's have become very popular for work and recreation on many farms. Along with their popularity has been a reported increase of serious injuries and deaths. Make ATV safety a priority on your farm.

The following are some safety ideas for ATV's:

1. An ATV is not a toy. Children should not be permitted to operate ATV's without specialized training.

2. Wear appropriate riding gear: DOT-, Snell ANSI- approved helmet, goggles, gloves, over the ankle boots, long sleeved shirt and long pants.

3. ATV's are not made for extra riders. Never carry anyone else on the ATV.

4. Any added attachments affect the stability, operating and braking of the ATV. Just because an attachment is available does not mean that it can be used without increasing your risk of being injured.

5. Do not operate the ATV on streets, highways or paved roads. and

6. Read owner's manual carefully.

To Look At Moisture In Homes

Moisture levels inside homes in winter may be high enough to cause mildew and other problems while dryness, on the other hand can also be a problem, reports Dr. Robert Thee, Penn State Extension Housing and Financial Management Agent. Dry air is often associated with wood burning stoves and fireplace inserts.

Forced hot air central heating systems may also add to drying conditions. Simple techniques to add moisture include placing containers of water on wood stoves, adding a humidifier to central heating systems or installing a separate humidifier. Relative humidity of 30 to 50 percent is recommended for the health of the house and 40 to 60 percent for the health of the occupants. An inexpensive hygrometer can indicate the level of the relative humidity in your home.

To Control Excessive Moisture

Often moisture will condense on windows causing wetness and dripping even while the relative humidity in the house is low enough to cause nasal and breathing problems. Dr. Robert Thee, Penn State Extension Housing and Financial Management Agent, reminds us that temperature and moisture are related.

Condensation on windows is more likely to be a result of a cold window than excessive moisture in the room. You can prevent condensation by warming the window surface above the dew point by adding storm windows and/or placing heated air vents below the window so that the warm air will remove the moisture from the glass much like the defroster works on the windshield of a car.

In cases where mildew is appearing on ceilings and at edges near the outside walls (not just in poorly ventilated corners of rooms), it is possible that the ceiling insulation is not properly installed. Insulation must extend over the top plate of the wall and be fitted tightly to the top plate.

Cold wind may blow under the insulation and chill the ceiling where vapor will then condense. Alternatively, the wall insulation may have settled allowing cold spots to occur at the top of the walls. In either case, insulation must be reposition or filled in.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

SAVE YOURSELF!

Background Scripture:
Luke 23:13-49.
Devotional Reading:
Luke 23:50-56.

The basic primal urge is to save one's self. We may hold out bravely for fidelity to others, devotion to a cause, and the fulfillment of a mission, but the insidious voice inside us keeps pleading with us to "save yourself!' Christianity does not deny the existence and persuasiveness of that voice within, but it does call us to hear a voice that calls us beyond saving ourselves.

Jesus taught us about those voices, not so much with what he said, as with what he himself did. After his baptism, when he went out into the wilderness for 40 days and nights, he heard the primal voice that called him to save himself: "If you are the Son of God, command this stone to become bread" (Lk 4:3). Jesus recognized this voice as that of the devil. In both the wilderness and at Calvary that voice spoke to him three times.

The first time at Calvary this voice came to him through the "rulers' who scoffed, "He saved others; let him save himself, if he is the Christ of God, his Chosen One!" (23:35). Notice that, as in the wilderness, the devil said, "If you are the Son of God...," on Calvary the rulers say "if he is the Christ of God." The devil seeks to undermine Jesus' understanding of who and what he is. Do not our temptations come to us in much the same way?

Self-Doubt

The next challenge at Calvary comes from the soldiers: "If you are the King of the Jews, save yourself" (23:37). The greatest temptations sometimes come to us through self-doubt and that is the thrust of the challenges to Jesus on Calvary. None of those challenging him expected Jesus to respond to their taunts. They didn't believe he could save others, nor did they believe that he was King of the Jews and could save himself.

One of the criminals who was being crucified at the same time, delivers to Jesus the third challenge: "Are you not the Christ? Save yourself and us!" (23:39) Once again this was not a sincere request. When the criminal called to Jesus, "Save yourself and us!", he is not really asking Jesus to save him; he is mocking him.

The other crucified criminal knows this and replies: "Do you not fear God, since you are under the same sentence of condemnation?"

The other criminal continues: "And we indeed justly; for we are receiving the due reward of our deeds...but this man has done nothing wrong." Turning to Jesus, he says: "Jesus, remember me when you come in your kingly power" and Jesus replies, "Truly, I say to you, today you will be with me in Paradise" (23:42,43).

Although most of those who stood at the cross taunted and reviled Jesus, this criminal made the most important decision of his life and committed himself to the crucified Christ. In doing so, he saved himself — not from death on the cross, but from the weight of his sins and the evil power of the cross.

Avoiding Crosses

Committing ourselves into the hands of Jesus does not mean that we will be saved from suffering and death in this life. Jesus is the prime example of this truth.

He chose to go to the cross rather than saving himself with an eternal compromise. But, because he was faithful to that commitment, he was saved, not from the cross, but after or despite the cross. He saved himself by first giving himself, sacrificing himself. The pain of the cross and the threat of death could not break his commitment: "Father, into thy hands I commit my spirit" (23:46).

Some people turn to Christianity to avoid crosses and then find that bearing crosses is what Christian discipleship is all about. In fact, the risk of bearing a cross increases when we truly follow Jesus. "If any man would come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me" (Mk. 8:35). That doesn't mean the Christian should seek a cross to bear, but neither should he or she turn away from one if it stands as an obstacle on the road to discipleship.

"For whoever would save his life will lose it, and whoever loses his life for my sake and the gospel's will save it" (Mk. 8:35. There is nothing wrong with our basic human instinct to "save ourselves," so long as we remember that the only way to save ourselves is to give ourselves — as Christ gave himself for us.

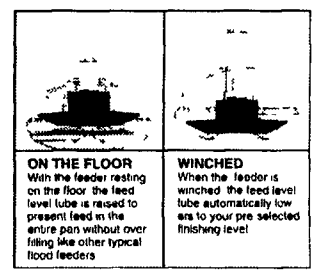
QUICK-START

The Pax QUICK-START™ pan feeding system grows chicks into FINISHED broilers efficiently.

Start chicks with the feeder resting on the floor and the feed pan entirely filled The Pax QUICK-START™ pan provides easy access to plenty of fresh feed – with no accumulation of stale feed in the drop tube – attracting even the smallest chicks to begin feeding right away



ON THE FLOOR	WINCHED

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Ken Bailey
Penn State University
February 9, 2001

Market Continues Showing Strength

- CME cheese prices rising
- Class III futures steady
- Class IV futures strengthening

What a difference a few weeks makes! Cheese prices at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange are on the rise. Prices for 40-pound blocks rose from $1 12 per pound on Monday, February 5 to $1 16 per pound by Friday, February 9. Barrel cheese prices rose from $1.16 per pound on Monday to $1.20 by Friday. This inversion between blocks and barrels will likely not last long

The futures prices at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange are showing signs of strength. As of February 9, the Class III futures settlement price was $10 20 per cwt for February. That price rose to $11.34 for June and peaked at $12.15 in August. Class III futures prices on February 8 were even higher, peaking at $12 38 for September.

The Class IV futures prices at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange showed even more price strength As of February 9, the Class IV futures settlement price was $12.61 per cwt for February. That price rose to $12 90 per cwt in June and peaked at $13 26 in August.

So what is driving these prices? It really boils down to future expectations of the milk supply. The December milk production report showed the milk supply even with a year ago with declining cow numbers There is concern that the high cost of energy, electricity problems in California, and profitability concerns in other western states like Idaho may further erode the milk supply. If that happens, look for cheese and butter prices to rise rapidly My sense , however, is that the market may be over reacting to very limited information. Let's look at the facts

Program Will Introduce Processing Of Specialty Dairy Products

FREDERICK, MD. — With their dense, diverse, and wealthy populations, Maryland and surrounding states offer an excellent market for a wide variety of premium dairy products. Few of these products, however, are made in the Mid-Atlantic region.

Dr. Scott Rankin, Extension dairy processing specialist with the University of Maryland College of Agriculture and Natural Resources, hopes to change that situation. To that end, he has organized the second annual Farmstead Milk Processing technical program for cow, goat, and sheep milk producers interested in manufacturing legal, high-quality dairy foods on the farm. The program, sponsored by Maryland Cooperative Extension, will be held March 24 at the Dutch's Daughter Conference Center in Frederick, Maryland.

"The manufacture of a variety of dairy foods, such as premium ice creams and specialty cheeses, can be an attractive alternative income opportunity for milk producers," says Rankin. "However, the success of such an enterprise depends on several critical items, including regulatory compliance, marketing, and appropriate processing technologies. Our goal is to introduce program participants to both the opportunities and challenges of farmstead milk processing by providing a realistic and practical overview of the subject."

Participants will discover what products are in demand, how cheeses are bought and sold, and what technical training is available in the United States. They will hear about equipment options, potential co-marketing opportunities, and the personal experiences of owners of successful small-scale operations.

A highlight for many will be a presentation on the diverse world of premium cheeses by Jim Path, who oversees the Specialty Cheese and Wisconsin Master Cheesemaker programs at the University of Wisconsin.

Advance registration is required. The fee for registrations postmarked by March 16 is $35; after that, the price increases to $45. Payment covers tuition, course materials, continental breakfast, break refreshments, hot buffet lunch, and wine-and-cheese tasting. For more information, contact Dr. Scott Rankin at (301) 405-4568 or rankins@wam.umd.edu. Or check out the program website at http://ansc.umd.edu/dairyfoods/index.html.

4-H Members In Champion Spotlight At Lancaster County Banquet

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — 4-H livestock and meats judging programs are more popular than ever, with 29 4-H'ers signing up last year, according to Chet Hughes, Lancaster County livestock agent.

Popular interest brought the most number of 4- H'ers to the program that "I've seen since I've been an agent," Hughes told about 300 4-H members, family, and friends late last week at the annual Lancaster County 4-H Livestock Banquet at the Farm and Home Center.

"Our livestock program continues to grow and flourish," Hughes said. "Enrollment in both the swine and Woolies clubs annually bumps 100 members. The new dairy beef club will nearly double in 2001, with more than 60 members."

Hughes said the 4-H goat program is "gaining in popularity. The most traditional of county livestock programs, the 4- H Red Rose Beef Club added eight new members last year, and had an outstanding showing of champion steers at the Pennsylvania Farm Show."

Many 4-H members were honored for outstanding contributions at the banquet.

Also, Farm Show scholarship winners from the county were recognized, including Gerald Boyd and Gerald's sister Sarah, and Jessica Schmidt.

In the Woolies Club, the annual $250 scholarship award began as a contribution from the Gerald Engle Family to the 4-H program to give back some of what their family gained in positive experiences and strong values. The Lancaster Sheep and Wool Growers Association also contributes to the scholarship fund.

Recipient this year was Michael Musser. Musser has been active in the Woolies 4-H Club for eight years, exhibiting more than 20 market lambs at 30 events.

Woolies Club President Award was presented to Radell Peters, 17, son of Ray and Becky Peters, Elizabethtown.

The Novice Shepherd Award was presented to Roanna Martin, 12, daughter of Galen and Nancy Martin, Mount Joy.

The 2000 Shepherd of the Year Award went to Jenniffer

Background

Orchardgrass and bluegrass, common pasture species, differ in adaptation to grazing and hot, dry weather.

Bluegrass stores reserves for regrowth underground in rhizomes, has growing points protected close to the soil surface, and therefore, is tolerant to close grazing. But often bluegrass is not productive during hot, dry weather.

Orchardgrass stores reserves in the stem base and is less tolerant to close, intensive grazing, but can be productive in summer. In this study, we described species contribution to seasonal forage production in a typical mixed Pennsylvania pasture, and hypothesized that intensive, close grazing would reduce orchardgrass persistence, forage production, and production during dry, summer periods.

Procedures

During the grazing seasons of 1998 and 1999, we compared the effect of two grazing regimes on a pasture dominated by orchardgrass, bluegrass, and quackgrass, with some legumes.

The experiment was a split-block with four replications, time was the whole plot, and grazing treatments were sub-blocks. The two grazing regimes were defined by orchardgrass height:

- Tall pastures were grazed when the average orchardgrass height was 11-inches down to three-inches.
- Short pastures were grazed when the average orchardgrass height was 8.5-inches down to two-inches. Forage available for grazing and species tiller density were sampled before each grazing event; orchardgrass stubble (stem base + leaves) was sampled after each grazing.

Major Findings

After grazing, orchardgrass stubble stem base and leaf dry weight were significantly higher in the tall pastures than the short pastures. Consequently, orchardgrass tiller density was significantly higher in the tall pastures over the two years.

Bluegrass tiller density did not differ significantly between grazing regimes, but quackgrass tiller density was higher in the short pastures. Bluegrass tiller density decreased dramatically during hot, dry weather.

Bluegrass tiller density was significantly higher than orchardgrass and quackgrass. However, orchardgrass produced more forage for grazing than bluegrass and quackgrass during dry summer periods, and over the entire season. And quackgrass produced a similar amount of forage for grazing as bluegrass produced.

The amount of orchardgrass and total forage grazed at each grazing event was significantly higher under the tall grazing regime than the short grazing regime. Further, the total forage grazed over 1998 and 1999 was significantly higher under the tall grazing regime than the short grazing regime.

Red Angus Marketing Programs Gaining New Ground

DENTON, Texas — It will not be long now and the pastures throughout the country will be full with new baby calves. Although the marketing of this calf crop is still far in the future, it is not too early to start thinking about the options that are available to assist with the marketing of your 2001 calf crop.

In 1995, the Red Angus Association of America implemented the first USDA process verified feeder calf program, which requires genotypic and source identification. Today this program, designed to identify true "Angus" genetics, is experiencing a tremendous amount of growth and acceptance through all segments of the beef industry.

Cattle that are the offspring of a registered Red Angus sire or dam are eligible to be enrolled in this certified feeder calf program.

Once enrollment qualifications are met, the Red Angus Association distributes the certified Red Angus ear tag, each containing an individual six-digit serial number.

Once enrolled, a number of marketing options are available through the Red Angus Marketing Program for cattle both coming off the ranch and out of the feedlot.

The recognition of the certified Red Angus ear tagging system continues to gain ground on a daily basis. The increased demand for genetically sourced and identified cattle is on the rise and as a result the number of cattle enrolled in the program has reached all-time highs at the feeder calf level. Feeder cattle buyers across the country have orders to locate and purchase cattle that are properly enrolled in the Red Angus feeder calf program and carrying the certified Red Angus ear tag.

From now through the end of March, the Red Angus Association of America is running a special sale on the certified Red Angus ear tags. Commercial producers can contact the Red Angus National Office before March 31 to enroll their calves into the program and receive the certified Red Angus ear tags for a cost of only $1 per head.

Certified Red Angus cattle are quickly becoming one of the hottest commodities in the market place, so take advantage of the acceptance and marketability of Red Angus sired cattle and call the Red Angus Marketing Department at (940) 387-3502 or enroll your calves today.

FUTURES MARKETS

Grade AA butter is currently trading at around $1 32 per pound That translates roughly to a Class IV price of around $12 64 per cwt Current butter prices are high because inventories are seasonally very low Butter production grew just 2 3 percent in 2000, while consumption (January through November) grew 1 9 percent Demand for milk fat has been strong in recent years and butter production is the last residual use for milk fat If the milk supply in 2001 grows just 1-2 percent, and that looks likely, butter will be very tight So, looking at the futures prices, the market is expecting Grade AA butter prices to peak at roughly $1 45 per pound this fall. Butter prices could get stronger than that

Cheese prices are going to be harder to predict The milk supply grew 3.4 percent in 2000 while cheese production grew 3 7 percent Total consumption of cheese (January through November) grew 2 1 percent for American Cheese and 5 5 percent for Other Cheese (mainly mozzeralla) We ended the year with cheese stocks 11 8 percent ahead of a year ago

Cheese production in December 2000, however, fell 2 2 percent below December 1999 There is concern that if the milk supply is off in 2001, cheese production will slow However, even if the milk supply grows just 1-2 percent, less cheese production will be offset some by slower cheese demand A soft economy in 2001 should translate into lower cheese sales And, it is very possible people may be over reacting to California's production woes No doubt California and Idaho will see slower growth rates for milk production However, that is not the same as a big drop in production

January cheese prices of $1 12 per pound translated into a Class III price of $9 99 per cwt It will take a cheese price of around $1 36 per pound to get a Class III price of $12 15 per cwt In my book a fall rally of $1 36 per pound for cheese looks very reasonable However, it is the market expectation of Class III prices between February and June that I am calling into question

These prices look fairly strong Dairy producers may want to consider contacting their broker or cooperative and locking in some of their 2001 milk supply given these futures prices. My advice is to lock in some of your milk supply relative to the Class III futures for February through June. Hold off locking in too much milk thereafter since the outlook beyond the summer months is highly speculative at this point I would also avoid a major commitment on Class IV futures contracts since I believe butter will be a limiting factor in the market place this year However, if you feel comfortable with these prices, consider locking in a small part of your 2001 milk supply relative to the Class IV prices, particularly during the first half of 2001.

Remember, a good strategy to follow is to set a limit regarding how much of your total milk supply to lock in during 2001 That number may be as low as 25 percent for those unfamiliar with futures markets, and may be as high as 50-75 percent for those with more experience

A much better picture of the dairy markets will unfold when USDA releases the January milk production report on February 16 and the next dairy stocks report (cold storage report) on February 21.

'Cornucopia' Provides Networking Forum

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

Making contacts, beginning relationships, and building bridges were results of a recent event for members of the General Assembly and representatives of the agriculture industry.

Sponsored by the Pennsylvania State Council of Farm Organizations, afternoon events featured the introduction of new legislative members and a policy meeting.

At the evening reception, event organizations expected 100 legislators, their staff, council members, and agriculture representatives to attend and discuss legislative agenda around Pennsylvania-grown agricultural foods.

Dr. Dean Kelley, dean of the University of Pennsylvania Veterinary School, emphasized the breadth of service available at the facility, such as a web page which updates the commonwealth on infectious disease research(cahpwww.nbc.upenn.edu/bse/bseinfo.html).

To keep up with the science community, the school has added a genome institute, since "genome sequencing will lead to huge amount of information available and provide a revolution in science."

With an $18 million matching grant from the government, the school is working on completing a teaching and research building.

In addition last week sows were moved into a farrowing unit, part of a new swine facility. A new equine facility opening in March at the New Bolton's Medical Center will aid in research for horses, along with advances in the study of fish nutrition taking place at the center.

Samuel Hayes, agriculture secretary, spoke briefly about the new recommended budget, which he said is "a good base for the legislature to spring from, to consider. There has been a lot of effort put into it, and we're very pleased at what the government has agreed to so far.

"We're pleased with where we are; we're also pleased with the legislature being pro-agriculture. We should be in good shape."

Dr. Neil Vincent, Delaware Valley College, updated the audience on events and changes at the college. A new greenhouse and laboratory space now accommodates the increase of students in landscape design and nursery majors.

The school has also begun work on an agri-marketing center facility. The new facility will provide a research and exploration opportunity for companies interested in marketing internationally.

During the "Heifers-For-Scholars" project, students raised and prepared heifers to be exported. The students were then able to follow the animals to their new homes in Puerto Rico.

The college has approximately 800 agriculture students on campus and has seen a steady increase in the last 3-4 years of enrollment in the agriculture program. The school hopes to further develop and enhance the marketing skills of its students, hopefully in the form of an educational center, "to prepare students for sales and marketing, which is part of agriculture," said Vincent.

Dr. Robert Steele, dean, college of agriculture at Penn State, gave a report on the increased

Heifer, Slaughter Sale For Relief

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — As part of a cattle restocking project for Mozambique, Africa, the 21st annual Heifer Sale will take place on March 21 at New Holland Sales Stables.

Any age weaned heifer, registered or grade animal, is open. The animal can also be milking, bred, or open. Producers can also donate a heifer and receive one half of the sale price.

During the 16-year civil war in Mozambique, 80 percent of the cattle were killed. Through this project, ten families will receive three female cattle. These families will give the first three calves born to another family, helping the farmers to cultivate idle land.

Thirty head of cattle were purchased at the March 2000 Heifer Sale, adding $50,500 to the cattle restocking project. The project also supports veterinary expenses, equipment, and training in animal health. Hay, straw, grain, or farmseeds donations are also accepted.

New this year is the all-year activity of a slaughter sale. Donations of slaughter cows, steers, bulls, calves, hogs, and goats are accepted. A producer can deliver the animal to New Holland Sales Stables, designate the animal for the Mennonite Central Committee (MCC), and receive a receipt for the amount of the sale price. The sale amount will be sent to the MCC for support of their worldwide programs.

Bull Test 84-Day Weight Results

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's Meat Animal Evaluation Center wishes to announce the 84-day weight results for PA's Bull Testing Program. There is an excellent group of bulls currently on test, consisting of 41 Angus (seven of which are Red), 23 Simmentals, eight Herefords, one Charolais and one Limousin.

Through 84 days, the 41 Angus bulls have maintained an average daily gain of 4.31 pounds per day with a lifetime weight per day of age of 3.46 pounds per day.

The top-gaining Angus bull, is the PS Traveler 351 614 son consigned by Marlin and Steve Paul, which gained 5.45 pounds per day. This bull is a full brother to the top-indexing Angus in last year's testing program. The second fastest-gaining bull of the breed is the Rito 353 of Rita 5H11 son consigned by Monica Feeser. This bull has gained 5.11 pounds per day on test and has maintained a 4.07 pounds per day lifetime weight per day of age.

The 23 Simmentals have a breed average daily gain of 4.34 pounds per day on test, and a lifetime weight per day of age of 3.61 pounds per day. The top gaining bull on test this year is the Simmental bull consigned by H. Robert McQuiston. This WAR Dynamite 620 sired bull has gained 6.79 pounds per day thus far and is well on his way to setting a new record for Average Daily Gain on test in the State of Pennsylvania. The fullblood, Fleckvich, son of Great Guns Ferdinand 132 posted the second fastest gain, among the Simmentals, of 5.07 pounds per day and has maintained a lifetime weight per day of age of 3.83 pounds per day.

This year, there are eight Herefords on test which have gained, on average, 3.66 pounds per day.

The top-gaining Hereford is the NJW 217 Vaquero 25C son, consigned by Frank Phoenix, which has gained 4.28 pounds per day on test. The second fastest-gaining Hereford is the consignment from Steve and Jeff Reigel. This son of Slayton Tremor 801, gained 4.26 pounds per day so far, and has maintained a lifetime weight per day of age of 3.13 pounds per day.

The top Charolais bull, consigned by Ray Bratton, has gained 5.29 pounds on test and has maintained the highest lifetime weight per day of age, over all 74 bulls, of all breeds with a lifetime weight 4.25 pounds per day.

The Limousin bull consigned by David and Lynda Miller has gained 3.51 pounds per day through 84 days and has posted a lifetime weight per day of age of 3.09 pounds per day.

The bulls will be weighed off test Feb. 20. They will have their final average daily gains and lifetime weight per day of ages calculated. The bulls will be scanned ultrasonically to obtain fat thickness and Loin-eye areas. Adjusted yearling weights and Final Index ratios will then be derived. The bulls will undergo a comprehensive breeding soundness exam, including a semen evaluation.

After all of the evaluations, the sale committee will select approximately the top 75 percent of the bulls to offer in PA's 28th Performance tested bull sale, March 30.

enrollments of students in the agriculture majors. Steele also mentioned the building projects of a new food science facility and plans for a forestry building.

The I-99 project, said Steele, will make the agriculture campus the "front door" of the university as visitors coming to the university will use the new road. The college of agriculture, said Steele, has lost some land to the construction project but continues to acquire farmland in the surrounding areas.

Also during the luncheon new members of the General Assembly formally introduced themselves and outlined what they would like to see accomplished in the upcoming legislative session.

Reports on resolutions, the yellow book project, and nominations were on the agenda for the annual meeting. Following the meeting was discussion on food safety, bio technology and environmental concerns.

At left, LeVan received a citation from the Senate, presented by Senator Michael Waugh, majority chair, Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee. The Cornucopia event, according to LeVan allows "farm organizations to work together. It's a way of showing that agriculture is together on political issues."

Farmland Trust Board Approves Record Number Of Farms

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Lancaster Farmland Trust's Board approved a record-making 11 farms for preservation at its February meeting.

According to Land Preservation Committee Chair Jeffrey R. Frey, "We're extremely proud of this accomplishment. It's the largest block of farmland our board has ever approved at one time. If all of these easements become finalized, Lancaster Farmland Trust will break all records for the number of farms and farmland acreage we have preserved in a year."

Frey is a farmer who lives in Willow Street.

The 11 farms approved for preservation account for 993 acres in eight Lancaster County townships. Several Amish farms are slated for preservation. Lancaster Farmland Trust will also partner with the Lancaster County Ag-preserve Board, at least one municipality, and possibly the Lancaster County Conservancy to pressure several of these farms.

Lancaster Farmland Trust has preserved 119 farms. Total acreage is 7,794.

Frey said, "We were delighted to consider preserving this many farms at one time. We will, however, subdue our excitement when we consider the challenge of the thousands of acres of precious Lancaster County farmland that remains to be preserved."

Dan Clubb, service representative from Kinze Manufacturing, Williamsburg, Iowa, presented an informational speech at Binkley and Hurst Brothers, Inc.'s recent planter educational meeting for producers. Planter use and maintenance was the focus of the meeting. Presentations included how to properly set, use, and check the planter.

Approximately 300 farmers from Pennsylvania, North Carolina, New Jersey, Virginia, and New York attended the event. An afternoon farmer forum and panel discussion dealt with issues that impact yields and how farming practices have evolved over the last 20 years. Producers also received an update on the Case/New Holland merger and Eric Schardt gave a product presentation for Case International.

Warren District Expands Forestry Program

You'll be seeing a new face at the Warren County Soil Conservation District Office.

Joe Bruschetta has joined the staff as a district forester and will be working along with Judson Bennett who has been with the district for almost five years.

Beginning back in 1984 the district established this program to fill an obvious void in forestry services available to land owners with smaller woodlots.

"My job is to provide cost effective forestry management planning and implementation services to Warren County landowners," said Bruschetta.

According to Duane Copley, district manager, "this additional manpower was long overdue and a welcome addition to a growing program. We have around 300 clients in this program and it just could not be handled by one forester any longer."

Bruschetta is a graduate of Rutgers University with a bachelor of science degree in natural resource management. Additionally he has a bachelor of arts degree from Kean University. Bruschetta resides in Harmony Township on their tree farm with his wife Barbara and their three children, Heather, Carmella, and Joseph.

Bruschetta is an approved New Jersey state forester and a member of the Society of American Foresters. He is the author of the "Warren County Community Forest Management Plan" and actively involved with the Warren County Shade Tree Commission.

Tag ID Meeting Producers' Needs

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — Since the introduction of the Holstein Association's Tag ID program in 1994, dairy producers across the country have switched to this time and money saving identification program. Producers are calling Tag ID the ultimate ID system and a critical reason why they continue to identify their herds.

The Holstein Association recently conducted a survey to determine if the Tag ID program was indeed meeting the needs of dairy producers. The responses on the 540 surveys returned speak for themselves.

Ninety-eight percent said that Tag ID has made the registration and identification of their herds easier, while 97 percent said that Tag ID fit well into their herd management system. With the wide variety of dairy operations in the U.S., few programs can boast customer satisfaction like this.

One factor that concerned many producers when the program was introduced was the retention rate of the tags. Seventy-six percent rated tag retention as above average. Good tag retention relies on proper tag application. The Association offers these tips to increase the tag retention in your herd:

1. Use the Allflex Universal or Total Tagger with the blunt tip pin. The black clip should not be on the tagger.

2. Place the tags in the tagger making sure the point of the male stem is aligned properly with the female tag.

3. Attach the Maxi, Large ID or Junior Tags between the ribs of the ear and about half the distance from the base of the head and the end of the ear.

4. If the Mini-Round is used, it should be placed up in the ear about an inch from the base of the head.

The success of the Tag ID program can be attributed to the flexibility of the program and the ease with which it can be integrated into any herd management program. If you would like to find out more about Tag ID call the Holstein Association at 1-800-952-5200.

They're Not Weeds, But 'Conservation Seeds'

"It's a good system," Ernst said of using living mulches such as vetch on fields, "but it's hard to get people to do it."

His conservation techniques with the vetch put him in contact with a variety of people regarding conservation practices, which in turn increased his awareness of natives and their place in the environment.

By 1964, Ernst had added 40 acres of leased land to his operation. Today, about 40 years later, Ernst plants about 2,000 acres, which are divided among five townships and spread throughout a 15-mile radius. All of the plots are in Crawford County.

"I originally tried to stay real concentrated in one location," Ernst said of his planting locations, "but then at some point you buy yourself out of land!"

The operation includes 30,000 square feet of warehouse space and 4,000 square feet of greenhouse.

His more commonly purchased products include seed for switchgrass, since it tolerates low fertility, and crownvetch for areas with steep banks. Ernst said he also sells a fair amount of Tioga deertongue, which tolerates a low pH and aluminum concentrations, and is desirable for strip-mine reclamation.

For farmers, Ernst said, items such as switchgrass and Niagra bit bluestem are a desirable forage for livestock, although they are a hard sell because they take several years to establish. Once established, however, Ernst said the grasses produce more volume.

Ernst said that as part of the USDA Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program (CREP), it is possible for farmers to receive subsidies for planting swtichgrass.

For the 2.5 million pounds of seed he produces each year, Ernst said he charges anywhere from 10 cents to $400 per pound, with prices based on production costs.

Ernst markets about 200 products, which comprise mostly seeds but include cuttings from plants such as dogwood and willow. He propagates the cuttings in a warehouse he has adapted by installing an overhead greenhouse irrigation system.

His sales in the past 20 years have increased by about 10 percent per year, he said. As the only business of its kind in the region, Ernst reaches his potential customers by attending conservation shows, speaking to trade associations, and advertising in publications.

Much of his success, said Ernst, has come from the participation of his family members. His wife, Marcia, handles accounting and administrative work for the company. His sons, Andy and Mike, are both trained in agronomy. His daughter Robin has a mobile restoration company that is often hired by customers to help implement the reclamation.

Although Ernst's orders have tripled in the last two years and average about 90 per day, he maintains that his success comes from doing what interests him. "It's not only because it's economically rewarding," he said. "It's also a vocation in a sense, because I love it. The whole family loves it."

Lancaster Dairy Days

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Lancaster Dairy Days will be held Feb. 20 and March 6, 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center.

The theme for the first day is "Getting Fresh Cows Off To A Good Start." In today's competitive business environment and during periods of tight profit margins it is imperative that cows be healthy and productive. How well a cow does in her lactation depends greatly upon the care she receives in the months prior to and after calving.

Dr. Robert J. VanSaun, of the Veterinary Science Department at Penn State, will explain how nutrition and management affect cows' health, milk production, conception rates, and profits. He will have numerous tips for managing heifers, dry cows, closeup cows and recently fresh cows to help them have a productive and profitable lactation.

Good quality forage is also important in the management of these transition cows. Dr. Arlyn Heinrichs, Dairy and Animal Science Department at Penn State, will talk about physical and chemical factors that affect forage quality and cow performance. He will discuss the effect of processing on digestibility, plus the effect of particle size, molds, and mycotoxins on rumen function, cow health and production.

The event is being conducted by Penn State Cooperative Extension of Lancaster. Anyone interested in dairy is invited.

Graziers Learn 'Maximum Management' Techniques At Conference

fours and 15-gallon barrels.

The boards are spliced and bolted to the barrel, then the fence is pulled along on barrels twice a day. Ropes hook to the corners, middle, and back in four places to allow movement in all directions.

"The calves line up at the front and walk along because they know they're moving on to fresh grass and grain," explained Strite. A lead wire attached to the fence makes the polywire hot and keeps the calves in check. "It's all very portable," he said.

Laneway construction consists of geotextile fabric with a layer of stones or lime, spread with a manure spreader, over top. Shingle tabs are ideal, he said, but are also hard to purchase because of high demand.

The Strites milk 90 cows and work two farms with a total of 300 acres. Approximately 170 of the acres are in grass, with the rest in woods.

The Forgey Farm

Dave Forgey milks 130 New Zealand Holstein-Friesan cross cattle on his seasonal grazing operation in Logansport, Ind. An experienced grazier, Forgey's land has been in grass for ten years.

After hearing about rotational grazing, his interest was piqued and he went on to learn about putting the land into grass. He attributes grass farming as the factor that saved his operation from debt and kept Forgey in the dairy business.

"This kind of a system, if you've been at it at all, takes a mindset change. It can't be done from the seat of a tractor or from the office," he said.

Watching costs is key, emphasized Forgey. "You need to know the cost of production to realize the advantages of grazing. Cost control is the easiest way to profit.

"Get out of the old mode of spending money you don't have to," he said.

"Question every expense; make sure it's a justifiable cost. Most of our inputs are lime and seed. Beyond that there's not much added to the farm.

"People are willing to look at new technology rather than a new system," he said. "Step outside the box. Put profit per unit over production per unit."

In conclusion, Forgey said, "the dairy industry is rapidly changing. Pasture systems provide a way to stay competitive today."

Hertzler's Moo-Echo Farm

Duane Hertzler, Loysville, owns 300 acres and rents 300 acres for Moo-Echo farm, with 270 acres in grass. The rented acreage yields corn silage and alfalfa haylage for the operation.

Hertzler purchased his Perry County farm in 1978 and built an 80-cow freestall barn. In 1993, the Hertzler family started looking at opportunities to become more profitable.

By then they were farming 1,000 acres, putting in 16-hour days, dealing with herd health problems, high somatic cell counts, and considering equipment replacement.

After they visited a grazing operation in December of 1993, the Hertzlers were convinced of the potential of farming on a grass-based operation. They began implementing their own grassland operation almost immediately and were ready to graze by April.

Since then, they have met goals such as buying less protein, feeding less grain, lowering the somatic cell count, improving herd health and reproduction, identifying heat detection more easily, decreasing cull rate, and enjoying a less stressful workday.

"We found that farming was less of a science and more of an art," said Hertzler.

Ken King, Kansas

Kenneth King, Hutchinson, Kansas, milks 75 head of cattle and owns 300 acres, 300 of which are in grass. Erosion problems on the Kansas plain helped to lead to the grassland operation.

"Have you ever told your kids, 'stop dreaming and get to work?'" he asked. "Have you ever spent a day helping your kids fulfill their dreams?

"I propose that when we develop our children's hands — which develop on their own anyway — instead of developing their minds — which takes creative attention to develop — then we lose out on a wonderful opportunity and resource.

"For too long in my life I've used my hands, scooping feed. It was when I spent time on the fence posts, observing my cows, that my life changed.

"I'm not downplaying or criticizing working with your hands," he said. But working with your hands comes naturally, and you have got to cultivate your mind, whether yours, or your childrens', or your employees'.

"You don't need to produce more than your neighbor to be competitive, you just have to produce more efficiently, or have a better marketing strategy."

Spend time trying to optimize, he said, and consider your resources, such as land, cattle, or customers. Even problems can be resources, as problems can be turned into assets. "The only limiting factor to resources is our minds," he said.

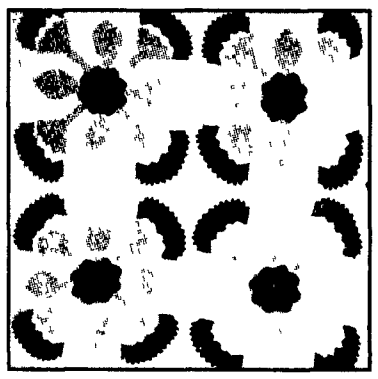
Quilts Span 200 Years Of American History

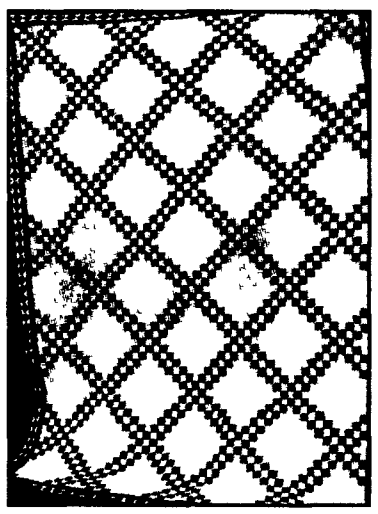


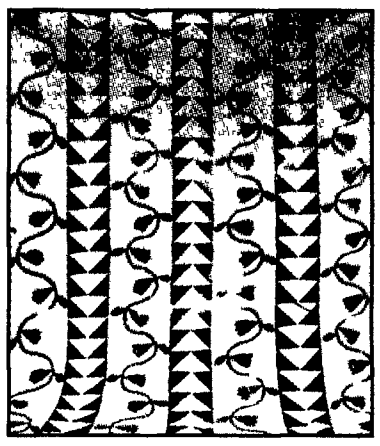
"The cheddar color in this quilt shouts the last quarter of the century," quilt experts believe.

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

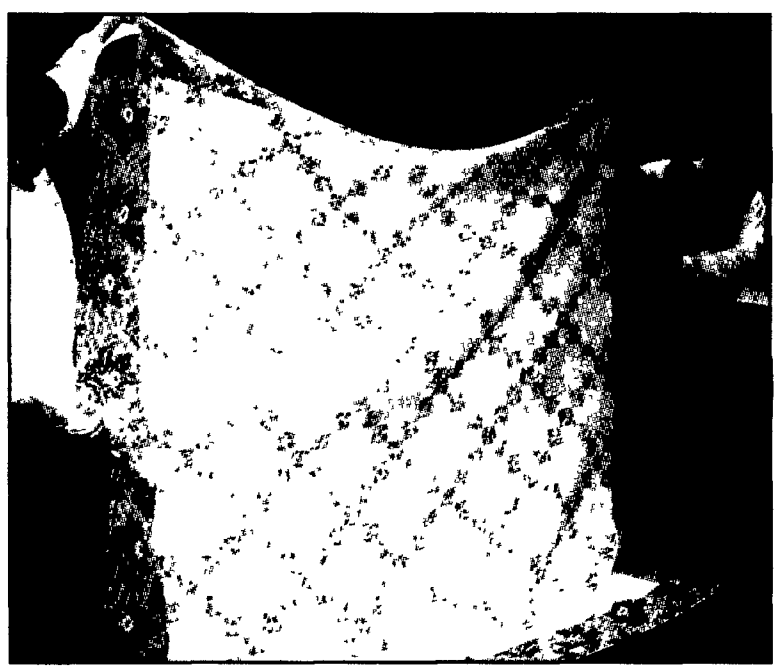
HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Most people admire quilts for their colors and designs. So does Roberta Benvin, but she sees much more than outward beauty. The colors, designs, fabrics, and techniques reveal the history of America.

The Spring Grove quilt expert authored the soon-to-be-released book, "Early 19th Century Quilts," and has professionally restored quilts and classified them for 10 years. Benvin recently displayed her collection of quilts that span 200 years during the Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention, Hershey.

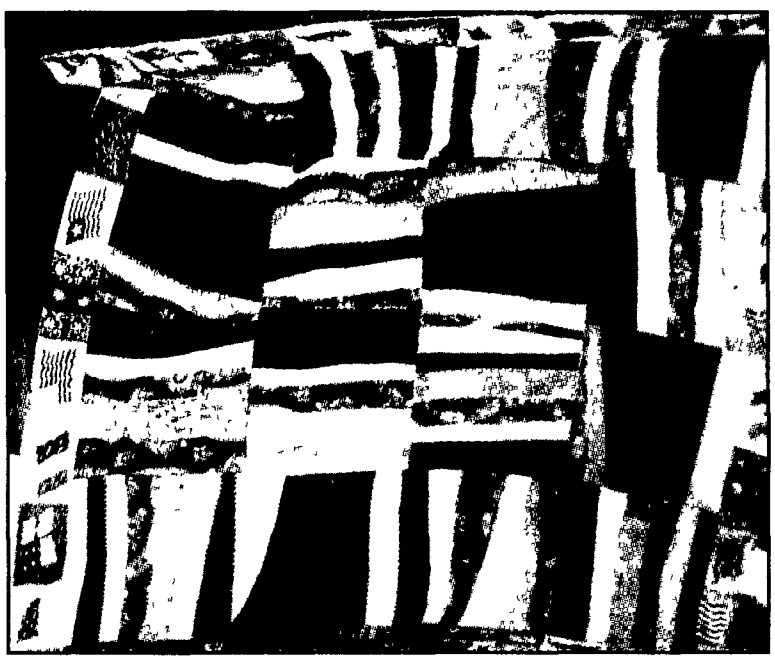




A close inspection of the crib quilt, left, dated 1920 shows that fabric was switched at the border indicating the seamstress ran out of fabric. On the right, the 1850's quilt combined applique and piecing techniques.



This 1795 block-printed quilt uses dyes typical of the era. Roberta Benvin has written a book and helped to document more than 1,600 quilts in York County.



These novelty quilts, sometimes called crazy quilts, were popular from 1880-1920. This one is unique in that the edges uses fabric called tobacco flannels, which were used to wrap cigars or to line the cigar boxes. The cigar wrappers were stitched in flags representing many different countries.

While some families have verbal or written histories on quilts, many quilts are documented through fabric, dye, and techniques that reveal the quilts' ages.

Quilts before 1825 were block printed. About 44 yards of fabric could be printed in a day with the block printing method. Women and children then drew in details such as stems.

Bevin said quilts from the 1820-1830s were large in size because families often slept in one bed. Another reason is that beds were placed higher off the floor.

Finer fabrics are traced back to England, but many fabrics were hand dyed. Popular were indigo and Turkey reds before the Civil War.

The unique color of Turkey red was named after a technique developed in the country of Turkey. Although Americans tried to duplicate it, their efforts were often unstable. Bevin said the process required boiling it in oil and some unusual ingredients for this era.

The color cheddar was popular during the latter part of the 1800s.

Just like today, fabric and quilt designs followed the fads of the era they were made.

"I try to get into the mind of the quilt maker," Bevin said of her efforts to document the ages of quilts.

This helps her recognize when fabrics were pieced intentionally in a design or when the quilter ran out of a particular fabric and replaced it with another fabric.

One of the quilts in Bevin's collection features fabric flags around the edges. These flags from many different countrys were tobacco flannels, used to wrap cigars or line cigar boxes during the latter part of the 1800s. A thrifty seamstress saw their aesthetic value and incorporated them into her quilt.

During the 1920s, penny squares were popular. These were purchased for a penny weekly or whenever the family went to town. The squares were given to children to embroider. The mother pieced the finished squares and completed a border.

Bevin said that 20th century quilts are generally not as elaborate as earlier quilts, although the Early Revivalists tried to duplicate them. One of the ways to differential the eras the quilt was made is by the batting. Cotton batting in the early quilts required close stitching to keep the batting in place.

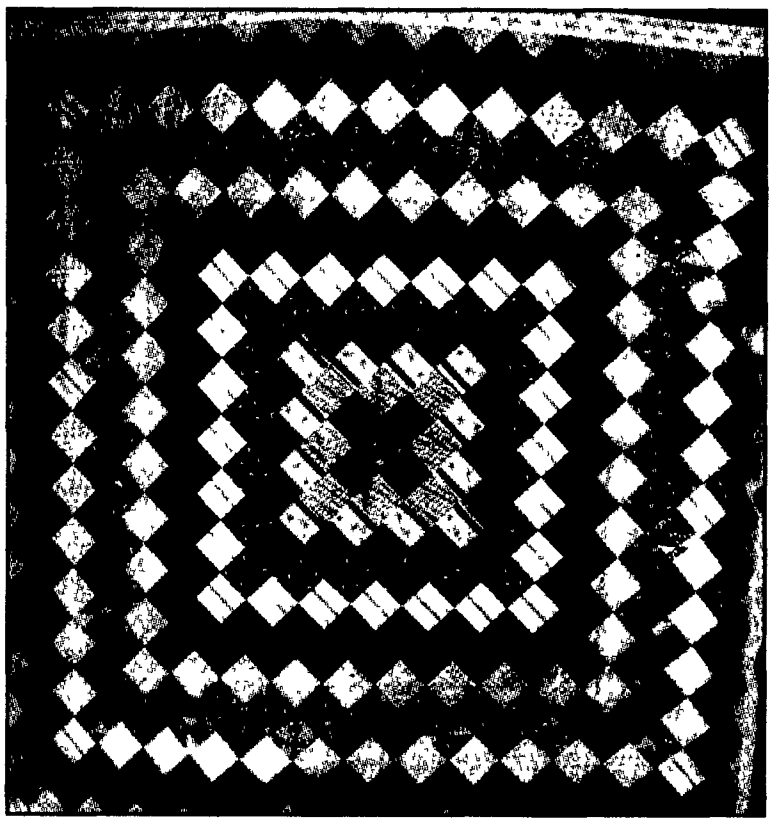
In fact, Bevins counted 20 stitches to the inch in some of the quilts she has documented. Many of the quilts reveal they were quilted by different family members because of the differences in stitching.

Several names are attributed to the same design because patterns were often passed on from state to state. In Texas, a design known as the Texas Lone Star is called Star of Bethlehem in Pennsylvania.

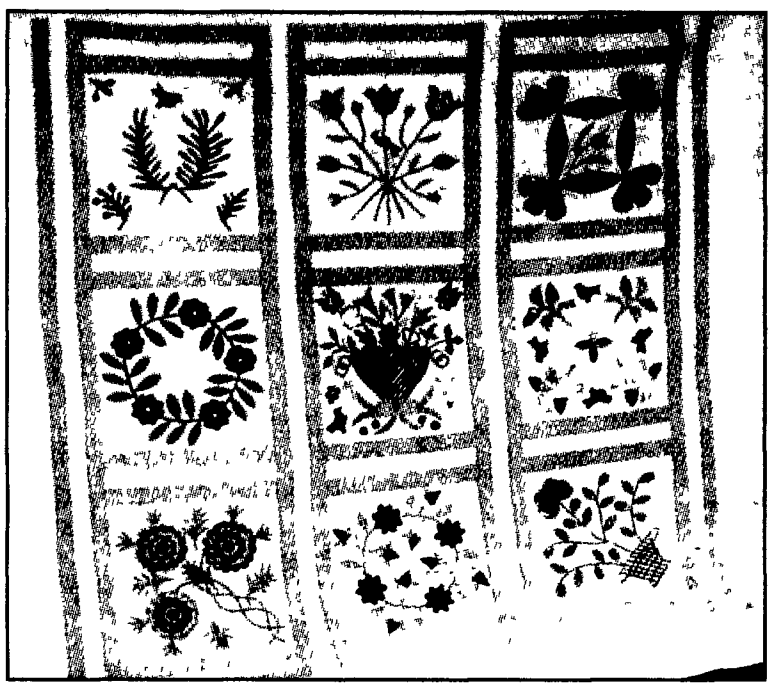
Quilts made during the 1940s featured bigger prints. Not as many quilts were made during World War I because women needed to work while their husbands were at war and the homemakers did not have time to make quilts. After the war, bedspreads were being sold in stores, and quilts lost their popularity until the Bicentennial, when interest in them was revived.

"Everything old became new again," said Bevins, who herself combined applique, piecing, embroidery, and close quilting in

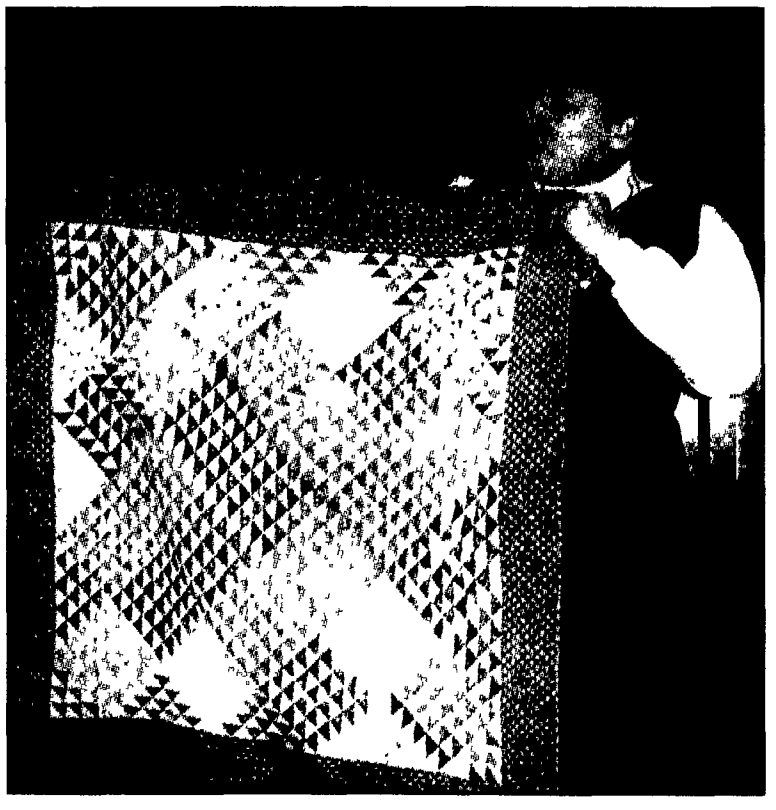
(Turn to Page B3)



This quilt forms an encyclopedia of fabrics typical of the 1890s.



The album quilt was popular during the 1850s-1860s. The style is influenced by the Baltimore Album quilts, which were much more detailed.



Crib quilts from the 1840s are highly prized collectibles because few survived the daily use.

Quilts Span 200 Years Of American History

A characteristic of quilts dated between the 1820s to1830s is that they are huge in order to cover beds that often allowed a whole family to sleep in it and were taller than today's bed.

creating a reproduction quilt.

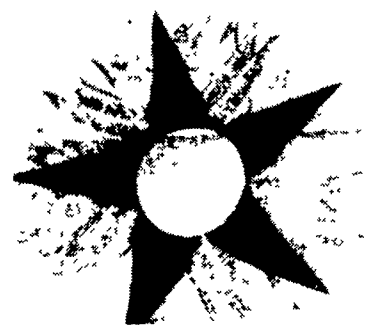
If you have a quilt, it is important to handle it properly to preserve its beauty.

"Don't ever send quilts to dry cleaners, which often ruins them," Bevin warned. Special quilt soaps will remove dirt from delicate fabrics. Place soap in machine and agitate, then add the quilt. Allow the quilt to soak 20 minutes without agitation then gently agitate for two minutes. Wring gently to remove excess water.

Do not store quilts in plastic bags which can cause mold. Instead wrap in a sheet. Do not allow it to come in direct contact with wood, which will leach the stain.

Display out of direct sunlight.

"Accept and appreciate the age of a quilt," Bevin said. Her collection includes many quilts with tattered areas, but she still sees beauty in them. "They tell a story."



An intense amount of quilting is featured in this quilt. Although some colors have faded, the indigo, a popular shade during the 1840s, retained its brightness.

On Being a Farm Wife (and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

We're getting antsy.

Maybe that's because winter has seemed so long and intense this year.

There's been ice cover on our ponds since late November. That's almost unprecedented.

Snow has covered the fields and farm off and on for many weeks, nearly melting away completely some time ago, then getting a repeat layer of ice slicks and white piles of fluff. That's actually been beneficial, providing an insulating coverlet blanket to fields and plants against freeze-drying winds and root-heaving cold.

So when I walked into the house after milking one recent evening, and realized that, even in the unlit house, it was still light enough to see objects, I felt some silent, inner rejoicing. When daylight is stretching to that length, we can be sure that winter's back — while not quite broken — is at least wearing out.

And with the impatience of the family 5-year-old, I, too, am wondering when the grass will turn green again.

On closer examination, a little of it already is. At sheltered spots around the yard, protected by buildings or slopes, tiny, perky shoots are pushing up from clusters of dried and matted grass residue. On a few south-facing corners of the flower beds, daffodil bulbs have poked their durable noses out from under the leaf-mulch covers. And a neighbor's willow trees are already turning that tantalizing soft-gold shade of imminent leaf-out.

Still, if there was a shred of doubt that winter harsh edge is being worn down, it was dispelled by the annual return of some special outside visitors.

Their reassuring calls coincided with a morning of warming temperatures last week, on a day hinting more of late March than mid-February. Pushing bales down through the hay-drop to the heifer pens beneath, I fled that job at first sound of the overhead calls to dash outside.

Two dozen Canada geese were winging overhead, honking with what sounded like the sheer joy of being alive. And headed north.

Moments later, I spotted more in the meadow below the house, some poking around residue on the cornfield, others rooting through grassy spots melting out from snowcover around the ponds. And one pair was standing in the middle of the big pond, at the spot where the nesting "island" is normally located. Or was before it broke loose and settled just under the water level about the time the ice began forming on the pond late November.

The pair waddled about forlornly, as if in search of the familiar water-level, wood-pallet nest base, which we have been unable to repair because it's been frozen in solidly for months. Had I thought it might have eased their minds, this wildlife landlord would have dashed to the pond that very moment with apologies and promises of repairs at first full thaw. Guess they're getting impatient, too.

Later that morning, several more seasonal harbingers spotted our fields. Handsome in their white and gray outfits, the noisy seagulls must have come looking for worms wiggling up out of the ground as the snowmelt saturated their hibernating burrows.

Accompanying Derra Dog on her nightly meadow walk a few evenings later, I made a startling find about another visitor stirring around the meadow. As we puttered along the distant side of one of the ponds after dark, my right leg suddenly plunged knee-deep into the ground, almost pitching me on my face.

When those groundhogs crawled out of the holes a few weeks ago to check the weather, they must have brought some muskrat cousins along with them.

But the muskrats didn't go back to sleep. Instead, they're out setting traps for hapless farm wives.

Wonder what my hide might be worth?

Bed And Breakfast Seminar

COLUMBUS, Ohio — People who like interaction and are looking for an alternative source of income may want to consider starting a bed and breakfast business, said Ed Smith, natural resources specialist at the East District office of Ohio State University Extension.

More and more people are taking weekend vacations to the country, and they often want to stay at a bed and breakfast.

"With some research and a modest investment, a bed and breakfast could become a successful full- or part-time business for the right type of person," Smith said. "The most successful bed and breakfast owners like to entertain, cook, show off their facilities and interact with people."

Smith and his wife, Ann, family and consumer sciences and community development agent at the Muskingum County office of Ohio State University Extension, have been teaching bed and breakfast seminars in Ohio and surrounding states for a number of years. They also have written a publication on starting a bed and breakfast.

The Smiths will be the featured speakers at a seminar, Establishing Your Bed and Breakfast Business, held March 1-2 at Marietta College in downtown Marietta, Ohio.

The seminar is for anyone interested in starting a bed and breakfast and for current operators looking to sharpen their skills.
said Eric Barrett, agriculture agent at the Washington County office of Ohio State University Extension who helped develop the program.

Many bed and breakfasts have started with a modest investment of $1,000 to $3,000. The major expenses are for licenses, insurance, minor fix-ups and marketing, Smith said. He estimates there are more than 500 bed and breakfasts in Ohio.

The potential earnings from a bed and breakfast range from a few thousand dollars per year to several hundred thousand, he said.

"There are a number of variables that affect the potential earnings, such as the number of bedrooms, location, the lodging charge, and the number of months the business is open throughout the year," Smith said.

During the two-day seminar, the Smiths will discuss how to start a bed and breakfast, marketing a bed and breakfast, food service, hospitality and sources of assistance. Other topics scheduled include how to prepare a business plan and Internet marketing.

A portion of the first afternoon will include a tour of local bed and breakfasts. That night, most participants will stay in a bed and breakfast to get one-on-one experience talking with the innkeepers.

The Establishing Your Bed and Breakfast Business seminar is sponsored by Ohio State University Extension, the Marietta Small Business Development Center and the Marietta-Washington County Convention and Visitors Bureau.

The program begins at 10:45 a.m. on March 1 and concludes at noon on March 2. The registration fee includes one lunch, breakfast, resource materials and one night's lodging in a bed and breakfast. Registration is $90 for one person, $140 for two people registering and staying together, and $40 per person if they are not staying in a bed and breakfast on March 1.

The number of registrations with no overnight accommodations is limited because the experience of staying in a bed and breakfast is critical to the learning experience, Barrett said.

Pre-registration is required by Feb. 24. For registration and more information about the seminar, contact Barrett at the Washington County Extension office, (740) 376-7431 or e-mail him at barrett.90@osu.edu. People who are interested in starting a bed and breakfast business but are unable to attend this program can receive the program materials by contacting Ed Smith at the East District Extension office, (740) 732-2381.

Holding Down Your Weight

Most of us have gained some weight over the years. Some statistics show that the average person gains about a pound a year after age 30. Some have gained significant weight around events such as pregnancy, quitting smoking, or loss of a family member. Any way we look at it, we now weigh more than we did in our early twenties.

The most recent weight and dietary survey of the U.S. population (NHANES II) found that more than half of the adults are overweight, and the average child is five pounds heavier than 10 years earlier!

Not surprisingly, the incidence of Type II diabetes, which is strongly linked to obesity has also risen. Other health risks that increase with obesity include hypertension and related cardiac disease, asthma, some cancers and arthritic diseases.

So why are we not trying harder to control our weight?

None of these chronic conditions or diseases will increase our quality of life in the future.

Weight maintenance comes down to a simple formula of energy (food) consumed equaling that being expended (physical activity and basil metabolism). Most of us don't know how many calories we eat or how many calories we burn in activity but could find out by consulting a registered dietitian or gym with trained staff.

All of the successful weight loss programs include food diaries, a record of what you eat each day that lets you see where you might make simple changes that would reduce the calories that you eat. It might be as simple as substituting sweetened drinks such as soda or iced tea with water or the diet version.

Many of us were more active when our children were young. Lifting toddlers and picking up their toys, walking to the park and coaching Little League are all activities that expend energy. As children grow up, we may drive them to more of their activities. When they move out, we have less household chores and may spend more time watching television, reading or using the computer.

Unless we stay physically active over the years, our body composition changes to include more fat and less muscle.

Muscle uses more energy than fat so our energy expenditure decreases.

It sounds like nature is working against us. In some ways, it is. Our current society is also trying to sabotage our efforts to resist weight gain. Fast food restaurants have supersized their meals, other restaurants have increased portions, soda and sweetened drinks are sold in larger bottles, and food is readily available for most people. The computer has invaded all segments of our lives, from video games to e-mail. We also find it difficult to walk to activities because of distance or safety reasons.

It comes down to you taking control of your weight. As the Volkswagen ad says, "There are passengers and drivers. Drivers wanted."

March is National Nutrition Month and the American Dietetics Association has chosen this year's slogan "Food and Fitness — build a healthy life style."

The food guide pyramid is the best gauge of whether your food choices are appropriate. Look at the recommended foods and serving sizes. Most of us need to add fruits and vegetables to our diet and remove some fatty foods. Unless you add a lot of butter or salad dressing to fruits and vegetables, they are low in calories.

Check servings sizes. A serving of green salad is 1 cup, ½ cup of cooked vegetables. Foods with lots of fiber fill you up. Chose an apple instead of juice.

Unless you have a physical job, most of us need to include some form of exercise into our day. Again you need to be a driver and take control. The benefits of exercise on our bones, blood sugar and cholesterol levels and even mental capacity have been proven over and over again. Even if you have ailments that prohibit certain movements, there are exercise programs in which you can participate. For most of us, a ½ hour walk 3-4 times a week will be beneficial. Even more will reap added health benefits.

Physical activity and an awareness of our food consumption are essential components in preventing continuing weight gain. They may even result in weight loss if you decide to get serious about taking control. And if the car slips backwards occasionally, don't worry about it. You are the driver, put it into drive, and you'll be back on the road to holding down your weight.

Unscented: What Does It Mean?

MONTOURSVILLE (Lycoming Co.) — Some people assume that unscented personal-care products won't cause allergic reactions. But some products labeled as "unscented" do contain fragrances that can trigger allergies in some people. Such products may contain fragrances that mask the smells of other ingredients. Hair spray in its natural state has a relatively unpleasant odor. So fragrance is added to make it "scent-neutral" and that is labeled "unscented."

Ingredients other than fragrances can cause one type of allergic reaction, skin rash. So if you've had problems in the past from using personal care products, search for one that doesn't cause a rash. To test a new one, place a small amount on a gauze bandage and stick it on some unexposed skin for two days. If a rash develops underneath the gauze, avoid that product.

Some people are susceptible to coughs, other respiratory irritation, or asthma attacks when exposed to strong smells. Those people may be better off with unscented rather than scented products.

Quick Cinnamon Sticky Buns uses a new product call cinnamon chips. In addition to using in baking recipes, the cinnamon chips can be stirred into hot breakfast cereal, pancake and waffle batters — or any dish where cinnamon flavor adds pizzazz.

FARMER'S BREAKFAST

2 ounces bulk turkey, pork, or Italian sausage
1 cup frozen hash brown potatoes
¼ cup chopped onion OR 1 tablespoons instant minced onion
6 eggs
⅓ cup milk
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon dill weed or snipped parsley

In 10- to 12-inch omelet pan or skillet over medium heat, cook sausage, stirring occasionally, until lightly browned. Remove from pan, drain and set aside. Pour off all but 3 tablespoons drippings. Add potatoes and onion. Cook over medium-high heat, stirring occasionally, until potatoes begin to brown, about 5-7 minutes. Reduce heat to medium. Beat together eggs, milk, salt, and dill weed until blended. Pour over potato mixture. Add reserved sausage. Scramble.

PUFFY PANCAKES OR WAFFLES

1¾ cups all-purpose flour
1⅓ tablespoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
4 eggs, separated
½ teaspoon cream of tartar
1⅓ cups milk
⅓ cup butter, melted
Butter, optional
Maple syrup, honey or preserves, optional

In large bowl, stir together flour, baking powder, and salt. Set aside.

In large mixing bowl, beat egg whites with cream of tartar at high speed until stiff but not dry, just until whites no longer slip when bowl is tilted.

In small bowl, beat together egg yolks, milk, and butter until thoroughly blended. Make a well in dry ingredients. Pour in yolk mixture. Stir just until moistened. Batter will be lumpy. Gently, but thoroughly fold flour mixture into whites.

For each pancake, pour about ¼ cup batter onto hot, lightly greased skillet or griddle. Cook on both sides until golden brown. Serve hot with butter and syrup if desired.

For each waffle, pour about 1 cup batter onto preheated, greased waffle baker. Bake as directed until steaming stops and lid lifts without resistance, about 5 minutes. Serve hot with butter and syrup, if desired.

Since ancient spice traders sailed the seas of the Orient, the aroma and taste of cinnamon have captivated young and old alike. Imported primarily from Indonesia and Vietnam, cinnamon ranks as one of the most popular spice flavors.

The spice is now appearing in a new form — cinnamon chips — a versatile baking chip that's perfect for adding sensational cinnamon flavor to any number of recipes.

While meat stews of the Middle East are enhanced with the flavor of cinnamon, and the French prefer this spice in desserts and fruit composts, here in the United States, we traditionally use cinnamon in baked goods.

Cinnamon chips add spark to the entire spectrum of brunch and breakfast pastries, plus a variety of cakes, cookies, and snacks. Cinnamon chips will soften when baked, but will not become liquid; they will set upon cooling.

Savor the scent of cinnamon all day with this "scentsational" recipe.

QUICK CINNAMON STICKY BUNS

1 cup packed brown sugar, divided
10 tablespoons butter, softened, divided
16-ounce package hot roll mix
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
1 cup hot water
1 egg
1⅔cups cinnamon chips

Grease two 9-inch round baking pans. Combine ½ cup brown sugar and 4 tablespoons softened butter in small bowl until smooth; spread one half mixture in bottom of each prepared pan. Set aside.

Combine contents of hot roll mix package, yeast packet and granulated sugar in large bowl. Using spoon, stir in water, 2 tablespoons butter and egg until dough pulls away from sides of bowl. Turn dough onto lightly floured surface. With lightly floured hands, shape into ball. Knead 5 minutes or until smooth, using additional flour if necessary.

To shape: Using lightly floured rolling pan, roll into 15x12-inch rectangle. Spread with remaining 4 tablespoons butter. Sprinkle with remaining ½ cup brown sugar and cinnamon chips, pressing lightly into dough. Starting with 12-inch side, roll tightly as for jelly roll; seal edges. Cut into 1-inch wide slices with floured knife. Arrange six slices, cut side down, in each prepared pan. Cover with towel; let rise in warm place until doubled, about 30 minutes.

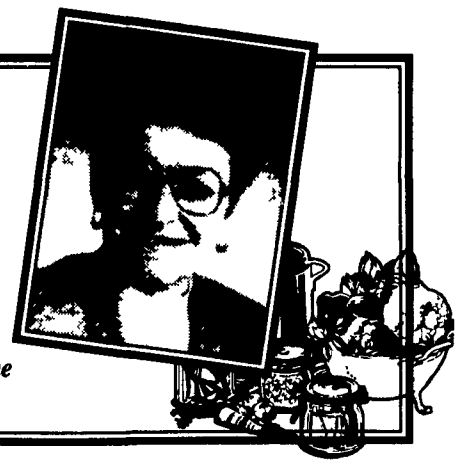
Heat oven to 350 degrees. Uncover rolls. Bake 25-30 minutes or until golden brown. Cool 2 minutes in pan; with knife, loosen around edges of pan. Invert onto serving plate. Serve warm or at room temperature. 12 cinnamon buns.

Consuming Thoughts

by

Fay Strickler

Penn State Extension Home Economist For Berks Co.



If you have been diagnosed with high cholesterol levels, you may think that most of your favorite foods are off limits. However, this is not the case. You can still eat many of the same foods but perhaps prepared differently on reducing the amount of these foods that you eat. Here are a few guidelines, which will help you plan low cholesterol meals. Because a high blood cholesterol level can develop at an early age, many doctors recommend low cholesterol meal planning for all family members, including children. It's a good idea to discuss these guidelines with your family doctor.

Meats and fish — Select fish, chicken, turkey and veal more often than beef, lamb and pork because the former are lower in saturated fat. Shellfish contain significant amounts of cholesterol, and should be used sparingly. Choose lean cuts of meat and lean ground beef. Trim all visible fat from meat before cooking. Roasting, baking, broiling and braising are recommended cooking methods. When frying and sauteing, use a highly polyunsaturated vegetable oil.

Limit your intake of luncheon meats, hot dogs and sausages because these usually contain considerable amounts of saturated fats. Also, reduce your consumption of organ meats, like liver, because these foods are very high in cholesterol.

Oil, margarine, and butter — Vegetables are excellent sources of polyunsaturated fats. Choose a vegetable oil, with a high level of polyunsaturated and a low level of saturates, instead of other cooking fats. Use a highly polyunsaturated margarine instead of butter. In most recipes, ¾ tablespoon of a highly polyunsaturated cooking oil, or one tablespoon of a highly polyunsaturated margarine, can be substituted for one tablespoon of melted butter.

Dairy products — Select fat free or low fat dairy products — skim milk and skim milk cheese in place of whole milk products, for example. Cut down on your use of cream and sour cream. Buy uncreamed or low-fat cottage cheese.

Egg yolks are the highest single source of cholesterol in the average American diet. Egg whites, however, are a good source of protein, contain no cholesterol, and can be used frequently.

Desserts — Select desserts low in fat, such as gelatin desserts, sherbets, ice milk, angel food cake and fruit. Most fruits contain little fat and no cholesterol, and are recommended for low cholesterol meal planning.

Reduce your consumption of ice cream, and "rich" baked goods, which normally contain dried egg yolks and significant amounts of saturated fats.

Breads and cereal based foods — Bread and cereal-based foods are generally low in saturated fat and cholesterol. Prepared cereals, rice, macaroni, spaghetti and flour are good examples. Egg noodles should be used infrequently, as they contain cholesterol.

Soups and gravies Bouillon-type soups are best, as others contain meat fat. When preparing soup made with meat, chill it and remove the fat, which will rise to the top before reheating and serving.

Make thickened gravy without meat fat by blending a cup of clear, defatted broth with the thickening agent.

Pets In Child Care

DAUPHIN (Dauphin Co.) — "Pets in Child Care" is the title of the workshop being presented by Penn State Cooperative Extension. Child care providers and interested parents can participate in the workshop at 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Thursday, March 22, at PSU Capital Campus, Olmstead Building, in Middletown or Thursday, March 1, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the Ag and Natural Resources Center, Dauphin.

Jane A. Mecum, Penn State Cooperative Extension Family Living Agent in Dauphin County, says, "Young children learn a great deal from observing and helping care for a pet. But choosing the right pet to have in a family child care home or center is very important. A veterinarian will suggest what pets are best in a child care program and how to avoid some of the common problems involving pets."

According to Jane Mecum, child care providers will go inside two child care programs and visit with two veteran providers who have pets in their program. The program will also include instructions on how to set up and maintain an aquarium.

Child care providers can receive two DPW training credits for participating in the workshop. Continuing Education Credits (CEUs) are also available.

For more information on the program, support materials and other services from "Better Kid Care," call Jane A. Mecum at (717) 921-8803. Visit the Better Kid Care Website at www.betterkidcare.psu.edu.

ANSWER — Marlin Winters, Elizabethtown, wanted a recipe for a good moist carrot cake without nuts. Thanks to many readers for sending recipes. Here is one from Margaret Kaltreider, Glenville, who writes that her grandchildren always hope she is serving carrot cake whenever they come for dinner.

Carrot Cake

2 cups sugar
1½ cups vegetable oil
4 eggs
2¼ cups sifted enriched flour
2 teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons baking soda
2 teaspoons cinnamon
3 cups coarsely grated raw carrots
1½ cups chopped nuts (optional)

Preheat oven to 300 degrees. Combine sugar, vegetable oil, and eggs; beat at medium speed for 2 minutes. Add dry ingredients and beat at low speed for one minute. Stir in grated carrots and nuts (if you desired the nuts). Spread batter in a greased floured 13x9x2-inch pan. Bake at 300 degrees about one hour, until cake tests done with a toothpick. Frost with cream cheese frosting, if desired.

Cream Cheese Frosting

8-ounce package cream cheese
¼ cup butter
2 teaspoons vanilla
1 pound confectioners' sugar (sift if lumpy)

Let cream cheese and butter warm to room temperature, cream thoroughly and add vanilla. Gradually beat in sugar. For good spreading consistency, frosting can be thickened by adding sugar or thinned by adding milk.

Here's a low-fat version, which Leona Matz, Galeton, writes is very good and moist.

Low-Fat Carrot Cake

1 cup pitted prunes
3 tablespoons water
4 cups coarsely shredded carrot
2 cups sugar
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
4 egg whites
8-ounce can unsweetened crushed pineapple, undrained
2 cups all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking soda
1½ teaspoons cinnamon
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup shredded sweetened coconut

Place prunes and water in a food processor or blender until smooth. Combine prunes, carrots, sugar, vanilla, egg whites, and pineapple in bowl, stir until well blended.

Combine flour, baking soda, cinnamon, and salt, stir well. Add flour mixture to carrot mixture, stirring just until moistened. Stir in coconut. Spoon into 9x13-inch pan coated with cooking spray. Bake at 375 degrees for 45 minutes. Yields 16 servings.

ANSWER — Tammy Coleman, Millersburg, wanted a recipe to make pumpernickel bread in a bread machine. Thanks to Gloria Sweigart, Manheim; Grace Glock, Fallston, Md., and others for sending recipes. Here is one from Judy van der Wal, who writes that this doesn't rise very high because it is so dense and heavy, but it is delicious.

Pumpernickel Bread

1¼ cups water
1 tablespoon canola oil
1 tablespoon molasses
½ teaspoon lecithin
2 cups whole wheat flour
1 cup dark rye flour
4 tablespoons dry milk
3 tablespoons gluten
3 tablespoons carob powder
1½ teaspoon salt
2½ teaspoon yeast

Layer ingredients in order listed. Set machine for whole wheat setting to bake.

Here is a recipe, which uses entirely different ingredients, from Gloria Sweigart.

Pumpernickel Bread

4 ounces milk
6-7-ounces water
1½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons molasses
1½ tablespoons butter
2½ cups bread flour
1 cup rye flour
1 teaspoon onion powder
1 tablespoon cocoa
2¼ teaspoons dry bread machine yeast

Have all ingredients at room temperature except milk. Measure all ingredients into machine bread pan in order listed. Select basic or whole wheat setting and medium crust setting. This is for a 2-pound loaf. Do not use delayed start.

Here's another recipe, which demonstrates that the end result may include very different ingredients. Thanks to E.L. Schreiter, Hamburg, for sending a recipe.

Pumpernickel Bread

2 cups bread flour
¼ cup rye flour
¼ cup whole wheat flour
1 tablespoon dry milk
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon butter
3 tablespoons cornmeal
2 tablespoons cocoa
2 tablespoons molasses
7½ fluid ounces water
1 teaspoon dry yeast

Layer ingredients in order listed. Set controls for basic bake mode.

ANSWER — Bob Snyder, Akron, Ohio, requested a recipe for hot rice, which includes onions, tomatoes, and other ingredients. Thanks to Ruth Klingles, Selinsgrove, for sending a recipe, which doesn't include tomatoes, but could be added. However, Bob might have thought the rice included tomatoes since red pepper gives it a reddish tint.

Dirty Rice

Saute:
1 pound loose ground hot sausage
1 green pepper, chopped fine
1 red pepper, chopped fine
3 pieces celery, chopped fine
1 large onion, chopped fine

Add:
4 cups chicken broth (2-4 bouillon cubes plus water)

Simmer until vegetables are tender. Season with garlic, oregano, parsley, sage, cumin powder, cayenne or bottled hot sauce to taste. Adjust seasonings with salt and pepper if desired.

Saute 2 cups raw rice in 2 tablespoons oil until coated and starting to turn golden. Add rice to boiling pot. Lower heat, cover, and simmer 10 minutes. Remove from heat and let stand 20 minutes until liquid is absorbed.

ANSWER — Annie Kauffman, Honey Brook, requested ice cream topping recipes similar to that made by Smuckers'. Thanks to Nancy Kramer, Newmanstown, for sending recipes.

Caramel Topping

½ cup packed brown sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
⅓ cup light cream
2 tablespoons light Karo syrup
1 tablespoon butter
½ teaspoon vanilla

In a heavy saucepan, mix sugar and corn-

Dairy Consumption For Heart Health

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The New England Journal of Medicine recently published new government research reaffirming lowfat dairy foods as part of a heart-healthy diet.

The study, called DASH (Dietary Approaches to Stop Hypertension), revealed that a diet including at least three servings of lowfat dairy foods and 8 to 10 servings of fruit and vegetables that is also low in fat and sodium may help reduce the risk of high blood pressure as effectively as some medications.

"High blood pressure affects 50 million Americans and is one of the leading causes of heart disease and stroke," says Debra Summerall, spokesperson for the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program. "This study provides even more evidence the DASH diet, which lowfat milk, yogurt and cheese may be a powerful weapon in reducing heart disease."

This news comes on the heels of last fall's release of dietary guidelines by the American Heart Association (AHA) that recommended lowfat dairy as part of a heart-healthy diet.

Immediately following the publication of the Journal article, dairy promotion staff worked with leading consumer media and health professional organizations to spread the word to consumers about dairy's health benefits. Nationally, more than 200 television news segments have aired across the country on more than 130 stations. Additionally, a news report by USA Today highlighted the important role of dairy foods in lowering high blood pressure.

In medium saucepan, heat sugar, milk, butter, and corn syrup to boiling, stirring constantly. Continue to stir and boil for one minute. Remove from heat and stir in candy. Cool and serve or store in refrigerator up to one week. Makes 2½ cups.

Pineapple Topping

3½ cups sugar
20-ounce can crushed pineapple
¼ cup maraschino cherries, chopped
¾ cup water
2 3-ounce pouches liquid pectin

Return to full rolling boil and boil for one minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat, stir and skim off foam. Pour into clean sterilized jars, leaving ¼-inch headspace. Seal with sterilized lids screwing band firmly tight. Process in water bath canner for 15 minutes. Makes about five half pints.

Pineapple topping is delicious on pancakes and waffles as well as ice cream.

Lewis Carroll

Lewis Carroll is the pen name of a famous English writer named Charles Dodgson. He was born on January 27, 1832. He is best known for his books Alice's Adventures In Wonderland (1865) and Through The Looking Glass (1872).

Carroll was the son of a clergyman and the first of 11 children. At an early age, he began to entertain himself and his family with magic tricks, marionette shows and stories.

Carroll was a pioneering photographer. He especially liked to photograph children. A girl named Alice Liddell sat for some of his pictures, and Carroll used her name for his heroine, Alice, in Alice's Adventures In Wonderland.

Along with his two famous books, Carroll also wrote about mathematics and he wrote some funny poems. The most famous of these is "Jabberwocky."

Try this. Lewis Carroll is famous for the nonsense words he used in his poems, like "jabberwocky," "chortle" and "snark." These words are interesting because they often sound like what they mean. For example, a chortle is a combination of a snort and a chuckle. Can you make up words for the way things sound?

American Heart Month

Staying healthy is very important. Many people today do different things to help stay healthy. They may exercise, eat special foods or get plenty of rest. This month is American Heart Month. Because the heart is such an important part of your body, it's important to keep it healthy.

Some ways you can help keep your heart healthy are by eating plenty of vegetables and fruits, exercising and playing a lot, telling your parents when you don't feel well, and by never using tobacco or drugs.

Ask your parents or teacher to talk with you about ways you can work to keep your heart healthy for your whole life!

Three Inputs Can Directly Affect Corn Yield
ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff
NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — Three basic producer inputs can have a direct relationship on yield, according to an agronomy agent who spoke during a young farmer twilight pesticide meeting
Bob Anderson, Lancaster County crops agent, said the factors are seed, fertilizer, and planting
When purchasing corn seed, "spend to get the best variety you can afford," Anderson told more than three dozen producers and agri-industry representatives
Anderson, who spoke at a twilight pesticide meeting at the Sylvan Blank Farm in New Holland in late June, said that growers should purchase the company's "top line, not something cheap
"It will pay for itself," he said
Fertilize noted Anderson, when necessary If you don't need it, "don't buy it," he said "You only need so much of it" Fertilizing includes proper liming
Jeff Stoltzfus, center, spoke about different corn herbicide trial rates at the twilight field meeting at the Sylvan Blank farm in June. Producers and ag representatives toured the crop trials at the farm, planted by New Holland farmer Gene Martin.
The corn was planted May 5 in about two dozen corn plots, measuring 50 feet long by 10 feet wide (four rows across). Photo by Andy Andrews
Nutrient Use Advantage To Dent Versus Flint Corn?
ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff
QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Dairy producers-corn growers have to start putting a "value to what you're growing, instead of thinking it's a 'bushel of corn' or a 'ton of silage,'" said Leland Miller, owner of Advanced Agronomics, an agronomic consulting firm located here
Miller, who spoke in mid-November to about a dozen Solanco Young Farmer Association members, outlined some advantages dent corn provides over the more popular flint varieties
In a test conducted in France and published in a leading dairy science magazine, according to Miller, dent corn showed improved percent starch in dry matter compared to flint corn It also showed marked improvement in other areas; including dry matter and percent starch digestibility
The dent corn exhibited a 30 percent improvement in starch use by the cow

Guests 'Kum Once't' To Try Dutch Dining

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Patrons dropped in on "Aunt Fanny" and "Jakie" during Martin Court Room Restaurant's Guest Chef Night benefiting Landis Valley Museum.

Menu options for the evening were taken from the museum's "Pennsylvania German Food and Traditions" cookbook. Guests polished their Pennsylvania Dutch dialect as they ordered Hinkel welschkann Supp (chicken corn soup), Gerooscht Welschhaahne (roasted turkey with sides), Fisch Kuche (salmon cakes with sides), complemented with Kannbrot and Weezebrot (rye and wheat breads), Mosert Grumbiere (mustard potatoes), and Salat mit Heimbier Rahm Salatbreith (salad with raspberry cream dressing). The meal ended on a sweet note with Lebkuche mit Rahm (gingerbread with whipped cream).

Characters "Aunt Fanny" and "Jakie" livened the evening with their traditional 1800s costumes and energetic banter delivered with Pennsylvania Dutch accent. Approximately 90 guests had reservations for the evening.

"I'm going to sing, but the good news is that I'm not going to sing long," said "Fanny" before she plunged into a song about a stolen cow.

"Fanny's" costume included an asafoetidae bag, literally, "devil's dirt," which was believed to keep evil spirits away. The pasty tree sap, which comes from the Far East, looks something like chewing gum, said Horner, and smells like a combination of garlic and old socks. "This was a time when fragrance was not so important," she said of the 1700 to early 1900 era. "They didn't know about germs, so they thought the evil spirits brought illness. They felt that something this strong had to keep evil spirits away."

"Aunt Fanny," portrayed by Jerri Horner, Manheim, and "Jakie," Tom Martin, Strasburg, are "an extension of a number of projects Tom and I have done together," said Horner.

Landis Valley Museum honored Mike Yeomans as volunteer of the year. Yeomans, who volunteers approximately 20 hours a week for the museum's farm program, has volunteered for a total of five years at the museum.

Both Martin and Horner are staff members at the museum and are drawing on their own Pennsylvania Dutch heritage, although "I'm from Johnstown, so "Jakie" had to teach me the local dialect," said Horner.

Horner also uses the "Fanny" character to teach folklore and pow-wowing (faith-healing), plus other historical subjects at the museum. "It's just a way to teach historical characters that makes it more entertaining," she said.

"It all started six or eight years ago when we were asked to put together a program about a funeral," she said. "We re-created an 1848 Mennonite funeral for a gentleman that once lived on Lebanon Valley Museum grounds for Harvest Days, a special event at the museum. Tom did the research and I took the material and turned it into a first-person program."

"It just works," said Horner. "Tom's an excellent researcher and I enjoy taking dry, small facts and making them entertaining."

The funeral turned out to be the most popular program Horner, a 15-year employee of the museum, had ever done.

"It's a unique topic that's not talked about much," said Martin, who added that the topic was a novel educational opportunity for museum visitors. "I was amazed at how much the children retained." Visitors were cautioned and told what to expect before they entered the "funeral."

"Aunt Fanny" taught about "funeral biscuits" or raisin pies, commonly found at funerals. Her presentation was followed by Martin's cooking demonstration. "We found it very exciting when young people would go from my program to his and say, "I know what those pies are," said Horner. "People still come up to us and talk to us about that funeral."

The funeral is not Martin and Horner's only collaborative effort. Martin researched and Horner was the primary writer of the Landis Valley Museum's cookbook.

Also during the evening Landis Valley Museum awarded Mike Yeomans with the volunteer of the year distinction. Yeomans, who volunteers approximately 20 hours a week for the museum's farm program, has volunteered for a total of five years at the museum.

After a visit to the museum, Yeomans decided to come back and become a volunteer, where he began as a guide. Next he did open hearth cooking and rye coil basketry, which he learned at the museum.

Two years ago Yeomans got involved with the farm program. "The farm program's been going for three years, and it just gets more exciting to work there as each year goes on," he said.

Check It Out: You Already Paid For This Year's Food

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

SOMERSET (Somerset Co.) On Feb 7, just 38 days into the year, the average American household had already paid for its annual supply of food, according to statistics from the U.S. Department of Agriculture. That figure even includes eating out.

In comparison, to pay local, state and federal taxes, the same wage and salary earners must work until May 3, or 123 days.

Which reveals that food is a bargain for American consumers and Food Check Out Day held by the Women's Committee of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, puts that agricultural headline squarely in the public eye.

Farmers and ranchers in the U.S. are the most productive in the world, plus the food they produce is the most affordable in the world.

To most families Food Check Out Day is oblivious, but not to Ronald McDonald Houses (RMH) who partake of the bounty of Food Check Out Day. The RMHs provide lodging for family members whose children with serious illnesses are being treated at nearby medical centers.

To rural Pennsylvanians even Farm Bureau families — the presence of an RMH means a home away from home in times of stress and uncertainty. The rural population in Pennsylvania is greater than in any of the 50 states. The comfort of having an RMH nearby cannot be measured by those from out of town who stay in them.

In relation to the five RMHs located inside the Keystone States borders, the participating county Farm Bureaus sought cooperation from their respective communities. Rising to occasion with drives for food commodities, household supplies, and monetary offerings whereby RMH pantries could be stockpiled, were various clubs, churches and schools that were eager to adopt a community service project.

Members of the Somerset County Farm Bureau pack the van with 30 and a half crates of food and supplies collected through community support for Food Check Out Day on Wednesday, Feb. 7. From left, Kurt Walker, SCFB vice-president; Phil Lehman, SCFB director; Harold Shaulis, SCFB president; Fred Boucher, SCFB director; Denise Rohrbaugh, SCFB secretary, and Food Check Out Day spokesperson for the Somerset to Erie region and Oscar Market, SCFB director. Donations from the PFBs 18-county region, to Pittsburgh Ronald McDonald House were estimated at $10,000.

Marlin Miller, manager of member relations at the PFB office in Camp Hill reported the following initial (donations are still arriving) statistics from Food Check Out Day: Danville RMH — $15,870; Philadelphia RMH — $15,250; Pittsburgh RMH — $10,000; Hershey RMH — $9,502; Scranton RMH $4,429.

These are estimates of the combined food, supplies, cash and gift certificates in each region.

"We are getting a lot of coverage in the media," Miller said. "The point is being made more clearly that food is inexpensive in comparison to taxes."

When representatives in the district from Somerset to Erie arrived at the Pittsburgh RMH, spokesperson Denise Rohrbaugh, who is secretary of the Somerset County Farm Bureau, said that in Somerset County alone, more than 30 and a half crates were transported in the produce van of Farm Bureau director, Phil Lehman. Lehman runs a vegetable operation with his son on the Garrett Shortcut near Berlin.

The groups that responded to Rohrbaugh's letter of invitation to participate were the Rockwood Chapter of the National Honor Society, St. Peters School, Somerset Boy Scout Troop 131, the Country Clovers 4-H Club and the county commissioners office in the courthouse.

Crawford County's 2,700 items were collected by one school and one church, Rohrbaugh reported.

"We did excellent this year," Rohrbaugh said in amazement. "We unloaded and unloaded and unloaded."

The bounty well exceeded that of Food Check Out Day 2000.

'While Food Check Out Day celebrates the efficiency and productivity of America's farmers and ranchers, the current tough economic times that agriculture faces," said Guy Donaldson, president of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, "cannot be overlooked.

"Low commodity prices, shrinking foreign markets, and escalating regulatory cost are threatening the very fabric of the American farm."

He added: "Prices at the supermarket certainly don't reflect the historically low commodity prices producers are receiving today. The farm to retail price spread is at a record low," he concluded.

Somerset County Farm Bureau president Harold Shaulis commented: "As Farm Bureau members, we provide a wide variety of services, not only to farmers but also other members of the community. We all have a vested interest in our communities and work hard to make them a better place to live," he added.

Besides being the state vice-chairman of the Dairy Promotion Program and a member of other dairy-related state organizations, Shaulis is an active 4-H leader, church member, and a member of several panels relevant to local government.

About 28,000 farm and rural families in 54 county units are represented in the PFB.

The non-governmental, voluntary farm organization is affiliated with the nation's largest general farm organization, the American Farm Bureau Federation, which is comprised of 5-million members.

In conclusion, Marlin Miller expressed his thoughts about Food Check Out Day having been held for the third time, with very upbeat comments.

'I think it's a wonderful project, a great networking of rural communities," he said.

"It causes us to interact more with our neighbors out there. People are willing to work for the common good of all."

Want to Get Rid of Trash Quicker? Just Add Water

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Trash in a municipal landfill could decompose about 10 to 20 times faster than it normally does through a system that keeps the trash continuously wet, new research suggests.

Landfills are normally dry environments, and the lack of adequate moisture doesn't allow biodegradable trash to decompose as quickly as it should, say researchers at Ohio State University.

In fact, keeping a landfill saturated means it could stabilize in five to 10 years, instead of taking the average 100 years or longer to do so, said Ann Christy, an assistant professor of food, agricultural and biological engineering at Ohio State. In a stabilized landfill, the majority of trash has decomposed.

"Quicker decomposition rates mean more room for more trash in the same landfill, which would cut down on the need for additional landfill space," she said. "This also feeds into recycling — once the biodegradable material decomposes, we can extract recyclables from the landfills, then the landfills aren't filling up as quickly."

Christy is currently experimenting with moisture levels in two laboratory-scale wet-tomb bioreactors. A wet-tomb bioreactor is a self-contained unit with water purposely pumped in — the water creates an environment suitable for bacteria to actively decompose waste. The water is recirculated throughout the system.

Christy's research appears in a recent issue of the journal Applied Engineering in Agriculture. She co-authored the study with Olli Tuovinen, a professor of microbiology at Ohio State, and Michael Myers, an engineer with the North Carolina Department of Environment and Natural Resources.

Christy and her colleagues monitored the experimental bioreactors for 15 months. Each bioreactor — or bin — was filled with approximately 3,300 pounds (1.5 metric tons) of non-shredded municipal solid waste collected from a local sanitary landfill. (While many small-scale landfills require waste to be shredded in order for it to fit, shredding is not economically feasible for a full-scale landfill, Christy said.) The bins were 3 feet long, 6 feet wide and 3 feet tall. The researchers could watch the decomposition through a 2-by-2.5 feet Plexiglas observation window installed in each bin.

The waste in one bin was covered with a single layer of sludge — sewage already decomposed by bacteria. Sludge has been used in landfills to help increase the rate at which trash decomposes. At the beginning of the study, researchers poured distilled water into each bin, until they saw the water draining into the liner under the bins. The used water — or leachate — was continuously pumped through the bins again via leachate recirculation pipes.

While the researchers did not get the decomposition results they had hoped for — the mass in the bin with the sludge layer decreased by one percent (to 3,009 pounds) in 15 months, and the mass of the other bin decreased by 1.3 percent (to 2,989 pounds) — they are confident that keeping a relatively high level of moisture in a landfill would increase the rate of decomposition, Christy said.

She attributed the lower-than-expected decomposition rates in this study to the lack of adequate amounts of bacteria and also the lack of heat production. Paper and plastic comprised 70 percent of the solid waste in these bins, while the two most readily biodegradable products, yard waste and food waste, comprised less than 5 percent of the total mass.

'The disproportionate amount of recyclables (paper and plastic) in the bins were undoubtedly a hindrance to the bacteria's success in breaking down the trash," Christy said. "In a full-size landfill, the types of trash would be more evenly distributed."

Christy is continuing the experiment, and says the next step is to take the technology to a full-scale landfill.

Because it is a self-contained system, constructing a full-scale wet-tomb bioreactor would be costlier at the outset, Christy said. Unlike current landfills, the bioreactors need the machinery, such as pumps and pipes, to recirculate leachate. But they would save money in the long run, because there would be no need to collect leachate and take it to a treatment facility, as is necessary with current landfills.

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

It is Monday morning, and it is snowing quite heavily. Schools have been canceled, but not in our township. Despite the fact that we live on a dead end road, the snow plow has been past our house two times. So the three grandchildren are off to school.

As we had a table full of guests last night, I put away my good dishes and silverware this morning. There were quite a few compliments on my baked corn and even a request for the recipe.

Then I began to telephone auctioneers to get "Sale Reports" from last week's auctions. Some want to be called at 6:30 a.m., some at 6:45 a.m., some at 7:45 a.m., and even some prefer Monday afternoon. It has been 25 years this February that I was assigned the job of getting prices from the auctioneers.

Mostly, it has been a pleasant experience as we have begun to recognize each other's voices on the telephone. However, some are not interested in giving prices for publication. Over the 25-year period, I've come to know some personally and even visited in their homes.

Long ago, there was a columnist, who wrote in our local paper and I always read his writings. I remember one thing that he said, "How sad it would be to live through the winter and die in the spring." It is something to think about. My husband's brother died recently after living in a Veterans' Home for a year. He no longer had a good quality of life.

I've helped at our church to serve a number of funeral meals. When a person is "up in years," often there is not a big attendance at the service. It seems that too many friends and relatives have gone before and only a few remain.

QUESTION — M. David Watts, Geigertown, wants to know of a supplier for Revival Hemorrhoid Salve.

ANSWER — J. Doherty, Needmore, requested instructions to make a baling twine wreath. Thanks to Gloria Sweigart, Manheim, for the following instructions: Use at least three sets of 18 bale ropes. (Use more or less ropes depending on how thick a braid you want, but always use the same amount in each set). Have all the knots toward the bottom. (We always cut our bales open within 2-inches of the knot). Using strong rubber bands secure each set of twine and braid like a pigtail. Then bend a wire coat hanger so into a round shape and braid around it, having the hook at top and have the last few inches open with the knots hanging down. Tie together so braid doesn't open. Decorate however you desire.

ANSWER — A reader wanted to know of a supplier for plastic rings to put on chicken feet to distinguish old chickens (2 years old) from one-year-olds when combined in the same room to conserve space. Thanks to John B. King, Kirkwood, who writes that a good supplier is Stromberg's Chicks and Pets Unlimited, Box 717, Fort Dodge, Iowa 50501.

The reader also wanted to know what causes some chickens to continue plucking feathers from other chickens. Is it a deficiency in the feed, and if so, what should be added to chicken mash made from homegrown grains? King said it isn't a deficiency.

Also, Louise Doric writes that leg bands are

ANSWER — Frank Heavner, Flinstone, Md., wrote that his 92-year-old mother has a very bad memory but recently began to sing a song from her youth that family members had never before heard her sing. He wanted the complete song. Thanks to Mary Ann Reich and Lois Smith, who both recognized the song from their childhood Sunday schools. The children requested the song so often the teachers were sick and tired of hearing it, but it remained a favorite of the students. The words and music were written by C. Austin Miles. If you want a copy of the music, write to Lois Smith, Box 78, Lampeter, PA 17537.

While singing the song, you can do the following exercise: A flag lying on a table is concealed. Before it are heaps of red, white, and blue paper, and also irregular pieces of white paper representing the stars. While singing the refrain, drop portions of paper upon the flag and after the third stanza ends, wave the flag.

How Betsy Made the Flag

Said Washington to Betsy Ross, a flag our nation needs,

To lead our valiant soldiers on to high and noble deeds. Now can you make one for us? To which she did reply, "I am not certain that I can, at least I'll gladly try.

Chorus: So she took some red for the blood they shed, some white for purity, some blue for loyalty, and sewed them all together, for loyal hearts and true; and hand in hand as one we stand, for the red, white, and blue.

Said Betsy Ross to Washington, "Your country's flag behold," an thro' his tear-dimmed eyes he saw the Stars and Stripes unfold. Then to his breast he clasped it and looked to heavn' above, "O may it ever stand," he cried, "for right and truth and love." Chorus She made the flag as we all know with stitches strong and neat, and neither on the land or sea has that flag met defeat. The Stars and Stripes shall ever above our country wave. Our land of truth and freedom and the homeland of the brave. Chorus.

ANSWER — A reader writes that she has an erector set for Marion Capp, who had requested one for her grandson. Call (843) 465-4050.

ANSWER — William Dereaney, 128 Primrose Rd., McDonald, wants to know where he can get waterproof glue that can be used for bee boxes and that withstand weather conditions. David Lapp, Myerstown, recommends Mr. Stickey's Underwater Glue sold by M.S.I. Toll-free number is 1-888-886-3181.

ANSWER — Amos S. Kauffman, 1860 Cambridge Rd., Honey Brook, wanted an old-fashioned carom board to use in a school. Larry Landis, Telford, writes that he has one in very good condition with game book, two sticks, green, red, and white rings, and nine bowling pins (1 missing). Call Landis at (215) 723-1208.

167-Year-Old Homestead Houses Family Heirlooms

The front room of the Aurand homestead features a Victrola from the early 1900s, a reverse painting lamp on the left, and a Tiffany-style lamp, made in the 1890s, on the right that once belonged to Nancy's great grandmother.

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

LEWISTOWN (Mifflin Co.) — There's no better way to display and enjoy family heirlooms than in a house that's been in the family for 167 years. That's what Nancy Aurand of the Ellen Chapel area of Mifflin County loves about her house.

"This board-and-batten house was built around 1833. I remember my great grandfather living here, but until I moved here, the house was vacant since 1972. My dad is the only one of six generations not to have lived here," Nancy said.

Nancy's father, Lynn, took photos of the restoration process, starting with a photo of the weather-beaten vacant house surrounded by overgrown trees. Nancy describes the restoration process as she steps from the new 28x28-feet kitchen and bedroom addition into the old part of the house.

"There's no plumbing in the old part. We rewired the electricity. The fireplace mantel had been exposed but the opening was covered. You could see the different ways the families had heated the house through the years. The cookstove, which is still here, was the main source of heat. Then there was terra cotta pipe put in at one time. Then a heater was installed in the front room." Nancy points to the exposed beams overhead.

"These are character holes," she said laughingly as she pointed to the nail holes. "We put on a new roof and reinforced the floor. The old part of the house was good structurally. Even the shutters were in place."

Nancy said the old basement features hand-hewn logs and a stove fireplace that was once painted pink!

Nancy uses the small summer kitchen to display a family Hoosier and her grandmother's gathering baskets for collecting eggs, her egg scale, and egg traveling case made of tin.

In the front room of the house, two chairs original to the house flank the now open fireplace. At the opposite end of the room stands her grandmother's floor-model Victrola, built around 1904.

On one wall hangs the framed marriage certificate of her grandparents (Betlyon). Upstairs in the old part of the house, Nancy uses one room to store childhood toys her mother, Dottie's, baby carriage, her own dollhouse, old dolls, the hutch her uncle built her, and her child-size set of china dishes.

In what was once her grandfather's bedroom, Nancy points to the linoleum on the floor and room-size pieces in several rooms that were found during remodeling. Nancy chose simply to clean and polish them. The brass bed in her grandfather's room once belonged to her mother's aunt.

Nancy Aurand

"I call this my bee room," Nancy says about the next room. "There were always dead bees in here, even when our grandfather lived here. About 15 years ago, they put a bee box outside and that took care of the bees. So I decided to decorate in the bee motif."

Her father's childhood brass bed is along one wall while the dresser is covered with Nancy's aunt's hats and jewelry.

In the next room, Nancy points to her mother's grandfather's desk and some artifacts kept from the store/post office her great-great-grandfather operated across the road.

A huge double globe oil lamp from Nancy's Grandmother A (Aurand) sits on an antique wicker table that once belonged to her Grandmother B (Betlyon). On two walls in Nancy's bedroom hang two quilts from her Grandmother Betlyon.

Earlier last year, Nancy celebrated her finished house by hosting the Aurand family reunion. More than 100 people, some from Kansas, came to hear the 167-year history of the Henry Aurand family, (which included Issac who had 11 children and from whom all of the Ferguson Valley Aurands descend), and to tour Nancy's

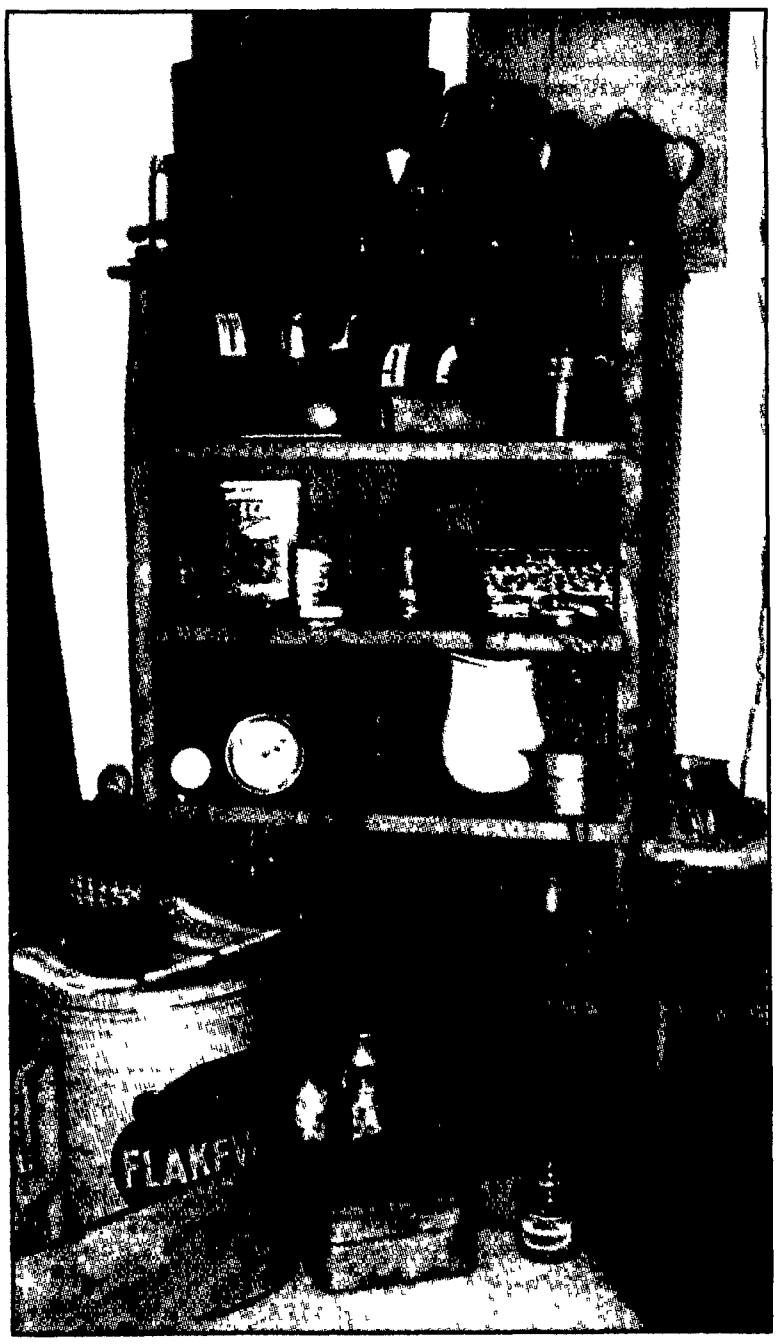
Display And Decorate With Collectibles



For a bold decorating statement, combine collections such as agateware with old tins and other treasured items. When artfully grouped together, the display adds eye appeal rather than pack rat disarray.

LOU ANN GOOD

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Maybe your collectibles aren't officially considered antiques, but the pieces are definitely treasured.

Ignore the age-old debate of what defines a true antique and boldly decorate with collectibles. Instead of timidly setting a piece here and there in your decorating scheme, group items together for dramatic effect and eye appeal.

Collectibles lend themselves to all decorating styles, from 18th century English to contemporary.

Cindy Wegaman of Exerter and Judy Kurtz of Denver have an eye for displaying items to their best advantage. In fact, they go into client's homes and arrange the home owner's collections.

Both Cindy's and Judy's homes contain collections interspersed among family heirlooms and handcrafted items. For them, there is always room for another flea market find.

"Don't seek perfection in every purchase," Judy's said. She believes the more primitive a piece looks, the better. Worn areas on wooden boxes, battered tin ware, and a dented milk pail recaptures a past era.

An old quilt with tattered areas can be folded to hide the worn area and stacked in an open cupboard for display. Or, a piece can be cut from a worn quilt and framed, turn into a cushion cover or used to dress a tea-stained muslin doll.

When attempting to capture a bygone era, Cindy said, "You don't need all old stuff. Put together things that you love."

Old wooden boxes, tinware, and agateware are some pieces that can mix well with newer house.

Nancy Aurand uses the old cookstove to show off her grandmother's pie rack, ladles from the farm, a scale and bolt of twine from her grandfather's store, a nut grinder, square-handled liquid measure, and kerosene light.

"It was nice to hear comments from when this home was a busy home. It was nice to hear stories from when it was a center of activity," Nancy said.

The Aurand home once again became a center of activity during the construction and remodeling phases.

"Anyone who dropped by during the construction got a job," Nancy says of the close family ties of Ferguson Valley and the Aurand family. "Ed Aurand did much of the work.

Ed is a fifth generation builder for a sixth generation from another branch of the family tree.

pottery pieces and handcrafted items to increase visual interest.

Tiny treasurers can often get lost if they are displayed among larger items. Instead group small collections together. Place prized tin cookie cutters on a table scale or in a rustic basket. Group porcelain figurines on a coffee table.

Wooden boxes with cubby holes or an old wooden medicine cupboard can be filled with small collections.

Chamber pots are no longer hidden under the bed but put in full display to hold a spare roll of toilet paper in the bathroom.

A rustic ladder is the perfect place from which to hang hand-dipped candles, drape a quilt, hook a lantern or place a tea-stained muslin doll.

No matter what you have, Judy and Cindy believe there is a way to display collections to give the impression of a true connoisseur rather than pack rat disarray.

In the weeks ahead, this section will include photographs of collectibles to offer insight and ideas for displaying your own treasured items.

In the photos, left, Judy Kurtz gathers treasured items for a display. Small items such as hat pins, and early 1900's toiletry items are grouped for more visual impact.

Pennsylvania Teen Wins Nationally

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

Sparks (Nevada) — Aleecha Jones of Loysburg, Bedford County, upon hearing the National Make It Yourself With Wool winner was "Pennsylvania," was ecstatic.

"When they called Pennsylvania," said the Northern Bedford High School senior and national winner, "my mouth dropped open."

Although she knew her outfit was well made, she hardly dared it was good enough in the senior division to walk off with national top seamstress honors.

Still, the black satin-lined, coat of 100 percent Pendleton wool with functional pockets and pocket flaps that convinced the judges at home. When accessorized by a scarf, hat, and black leather boots the effect was fashionable and striking.

Earlier, after the state competition last October, Jones had mentioned how difficult it had been to get the pockets to look nice. She stuck to the task and now is glad she invested the time and patience and ended up with a top-notch project.

Underneath the coat, Jones wore a contrasting, well-fitting, cranberry skirt of 100 percent Pendleton wool that featured back darts, invisible zipper, and back slit. A matching cranberry vest was set off by a black silk turtleneck sweater worn underneath.

She opted all around to follow Butterick patterns.

Several tuxedos constructed by male contestants impressed Jones, she said, as did some of the prom gowns, suits, and dresses of her competitors.

Since the real star of the show was wool, the obvious indication is its adaptability to any style or season.

Interestingly, Jones currently, is constructing her own prom gown and another for a friend, she said.

Witnessing his daughter's success, Tom Jones said, for the second time in his life: "I'm a pretty proud Papa." The first time he said that was some 17 years earlier, when Karen, his wife, delivered their little girl into the world.

"We are just tickled to have her in the top 13," he added.

Besides her parents Jones, was blessed to be surrounded by close kinfolk for the celebration. There were brother Nick, 15, grandparents James and Shirley Pennel, and Uncle Jack and Aunt Luann Machise from Florida.

Pennsylvania last brought home a national MIYWW junior title in 1987 thanks to 16-year old Judy Rhoads of Somerset County, a sister to Jodell (Rhoads) Antram, a Pennsylvania MIYWW director who attended this year's event in Nevada.

Antram, herself, represented the state at nationals three times and in 1992, was the second runner-up.

For now, however, she is focusing on an exciting new MIYWW category called "Made For Others." The competition is open to anyone, but requires that both the person who constructed a garment and the one for whom it was constructed must agree to attend MIYWW.

Antram is also broadening the states MIYWW exposure. "I've gotten it out of a hotel setting and into public setting," she said about the competition. The last two years it was located at the Galleria Mall in Johnstown, Cambria County. The style show took place on the Boscov's stage.

Persons interested in the Pennsylvania 2001 MIYWW may contact Antram at (814) 443-3189 for updated information.

Thomas W. Calvert, who is the 2001-2002 president of the Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Growers Association, not only enjoyed the national MIYWW style show's professionalism but was suitably impressed by the two state candidates.

"Deidra Smith who is our state lamb and wool queen was pulled out in the top 13 (honorable mention) of the juniors," he said. "Both (Smith and Jones) contestants did very well," he added in praise of their performances.

"It was quite a production," Calvert said, mentioning the catchy theme: "God Bless the Ewe S. A."

Miss Nevada Tiffanie Story, a guest performer, sang the Star Spangled Banner during festivities.

Contestants participated in the rigors of two three-hour rehearsals to memorize the choreography and correctly master every step with the professional dancers, Jones said.

Make It Yourself With Wool was held in conjunction with the American Sheep Industry annual meeting in Reno.

Contestants were not allowed to have any contact with their families in the days prior to the contest. However, schedules allowed little time for loneliness. There were judging events, workshops, and practice sessions, which fairly exhausted the teens.

They also listened to Story's speech about domestic violence.

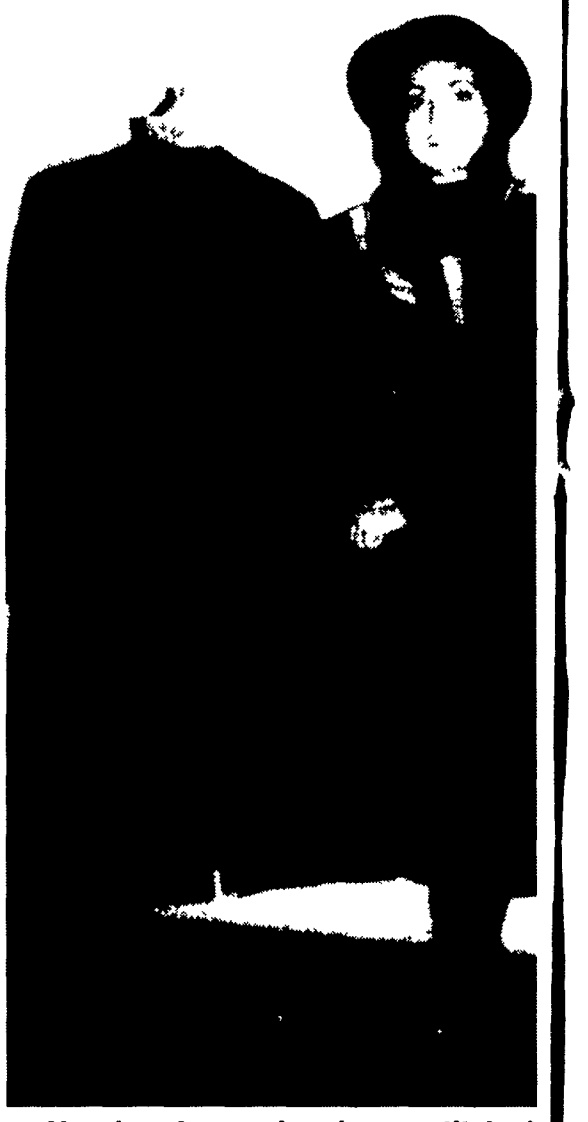
Jone's awards include a $1,500 scholarship from the American Sheep Industry Women, a $100 wool fabric gift certificate from Britex Fabrics, San Francisco, fabric from Franetta Fabrics, and a sheep pelt from Stockman Bank of Billings, Montana.

Twenty-nine contestants participated in the senior division and 27 in the junior division.

After the event, Jones and her brother skied at Lake Tahoe.

Jones is a twirler and loves track sports. At her grandfather Pennel's farm she tends sheep and pigs that are being raised for 4-H projects. She is a nine-year member of the Loysburg Sewing 4-H club and is active in the Grace Community Church youth group.

Jones has participated six years in the state MIYWW and hopes the groundwork will further a dream for a career in fashion design — the field of study she plans to pursue in college.



Aleecha Jones, Loysburg, stitched this fully-lined wool outfit to win national competition in the Make-It-With-Wool contest conducted in Nevada.

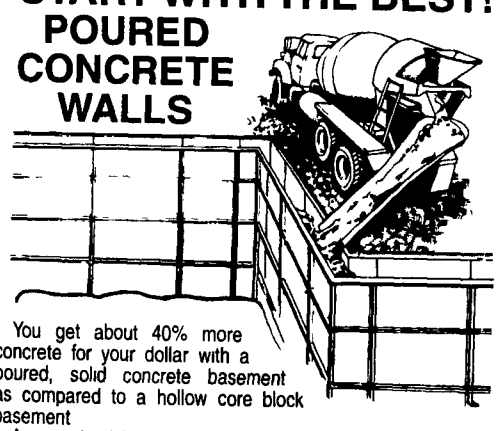
POURED SOLID CONCRETE
STORAGE SYSTEM SPECIALISTS

START WITH THE BEST! POURED CONCRETE WALLS



You get about 40% more concrete for your dollar with a poured, solid concrete basement as compared to a hollow core block basement

A poured solid concrete basement weighs about 50 lbs more per cubic foot! Far denser What's more, poured solid concrete walls are monolithic there are no joints!

This is why laboratory tests show poured, solid concrete basements have many times the flexural and compressive strength to withstand the side and down pressures caused by earth, wind, water and building loads and the material density to resist water penetration

Best of all, thanks to modern and efficient construction techniques poured, solid concrete basements are competitively priced

Solid Concrete For:
- Manure Pit Walls
- Hog House Walls
- Barnyard Walls
- Chicken House Walls
- Retaining Walls
- House Foundation Walls
- Silage Pit Walls
- Cistern Walls
- Concrete Decks
- Concrete Pit Tops

Krone Unveils Changes, Innovations

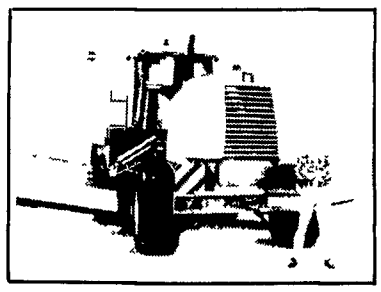
MEMPHIS, Tenn. — As beef, dairy, and commercial hay and forage operations continue to become larger and more sophisticated, Krone NA, Inc. has taken drastic measures to ensure it is positioned to serve those markets in the U.S. and Canada.

The company has undergone a name change, stock ownership change, doubled the size of its headquarters, and moved to the nation's distribution center.

While the move across the Mississippi River from West Memphis, Ark. to the Outland Business Center in Memphis involved relatively few miles, the different between the two facilities could not be more striking. Located in a major industrial section of the city, Krone now has space designed to company specifications, including new distribution and storage systems for improved operating efficiencies. An equipment showroom will open by the beginning of the season for visiting dealers and farmers.

"This will mean a higher level of service to the Krone dealer network as well as to the end users of Krone products," said Rusty Fowler, president and CEO of Krone NA. "The changes in the market and the customer base require much closer contact by Krone personnel with dealer personnel and end users. The new technologies associated with the present and future machines means that Krone NA must provide a much higher level of training for operators and technicians. For that reason, we built a large training facility that will provide classroom and hands-on training for dealers, dealer service personnel, and the end users of our products. Service training classes have already begun and will continue through April."

The changes referred to by Fowler began in the early '90s when the company's mid-size customer base in the U.S. and worldwide began to shrink as consolidation resulted in fewer, larger operations. In response, Bernard Krone GmbH, the German parent company, developed the Big Pack baler line. These large, square balers, which make bales in the 1,000- to 2,000-pound range, are designed for large hay harvesting operations as well as custom baling operations.



The Big M is a self-propelled, 300 horsepower, 30-foot mower conditioner that can cut and condition more than 30 acres of hay per hour.

Since that time, Krone has continued a dramatic product line expansion, including sophisticated, high technology balers for specialized operations, larger mounted and pull-type mowing machines (cutting up to 20-feet), larger hay rakes and tedders (up to 49-feet), and, the flagship of the line, the Big M.

The Big M is a self-propelled, 300 horsepower, 30-foot mower conditioner that can cut and condition more than 30 acres of hay per hour. This harvesting giant represents a tremendous leap forward in hay harvesting technology and productivity. It is the most striking example of all the new Krone technology designed to reduce the cost of harvesting.

Fowler says the introduction of new, larger equipment will not slow in the foreseeable future, and this fact necessitated the move to larger, more customized, more conveniently located facilities.

DuPont Insecticide Receives EPA Section 3 Label

WILMINGTON, Del. — The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has granted DuPont Avaunt insecticide a Section 3 label for control of major worm pests in head and leaf lettuce, cabbage, broccoli, cauliflower, tomatoes, peppers, sweet corn (whorl applications only), apples, and pears.

Registration applications have been submitted to the states for review and approval.

Avaunt is a low-use rate product that provides growers with a new tool for integrated pest management (IPM) and resistance management. Its unique mode of action is a perfect fit in rotational chemistry programs.

After ingestion, Avaunt works by inhibiting sodium ion entry into nerve cells, resulting in paralysis and death of targeted pests. Cessation of feeding occurs in one to four hours, delivering excellent crop protection.

In vegetables, these pests include armyworms, cabbage looper, corn earworm (in lettuce), diamondback moth, imported cabbageworm, tomato fruitworm, and tomato pinworm. In apple and pear crops, susceptible insects include plum curculio, codling moth, Oriental fruit moth, lesser appleworm, redbanded leafrollers, tufted apple bud moth, white apple and potato leafhoppers, tarnished plant bug, and apple maggot.

While Avaunt protects the crop against targeted pests, it has demonstrated minimal impact on most beneficial insects and nontarget organisms.

"Because of its low use rate and favorable environmental and ecological profiles, DuPont Avaunt was designated a reduced-risk product by the EPA in the registration process. With these attributes and its unique mode of action, Avaunt will enhance integrated pest management and resistance management programs," said Lynn Loughary, DuPont Crop Protection.

Avaunt insecticide is formulated as a water-dispersible granule containing 30 percent active ingredient. At labeled rates, it can provide from five to 14 days of residual protection of treated leaves and fruit, depending upon the insect population pressure, crop and environmental conditions. Avaunt is not systemic and does not protect new growth

Garst Seed Completes StarLink Testing Of Hybrid, Parent Seed Inventories

SLATER, Iowa — Garst Seed Company has announced the completion of their hybrid testing for possible StarLink™ Bt technology contamination in their 2001 seed inventory.

The testing includes all corn hybrids sold under the Garst, AgriPro, Gutwein/Garst, and PSA/Garst brand names.

Garst initiated their hybrid testing in November 2000 to test their seed inventory for the 2001 crop year. With more than 140 different hybrids to test, the testing process has been extensive.

Steve Klein, director of marketing for Garst, said that "a very limited number" of seed lots were confirmed positive for StarLink contamination but those lots will not be available for sale.

"Our commitment to our customers remains — we will not sell any hybrid seed that confirms a positive test for StarLink based on our testing procedures," said Klein.

"The net effect on our seed inventory is insignificant," said Klein. "The seed supply of our leading products remains very good."

In addition to testing hybrid seed that will be sold to growers, Garst also has been testing their parent seed stock.

The parent seed stock produces the hybrid seed corn, which is then purchased and planted by growers. "None of the parent seed stock was confirmed to show the presence of the Cry9C protein (StarLink) using our testing procedures," said John Edlin, director of production for Garst. "Testing the parent seed stock is an additional step we took so as to provide quality assurance to our customers."

In late December 2000, the USDA sent a letter to all seed companies recommending them to sample and test their seed inventories and parent seed stock for possible StarLink contamination. Jan. 22, 2001, the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) issued a statement encouraging corn growers to ask their seed suppliers if they have tested their seed inventories.

"We've been very aware of our customers' concerns regarding the StarLink issue," said Klein. "Our testing procedure was initiated so we can provide a quality seed supply to our customers. We also fully support the NCGA's recommendation that corn growers ask their seed suppliers about their testing procedures."

The company is continuing the use of a toll-free telephone number for growers who may have questions and concerns: (800) 831-6630, ext. 5277.

Agreement Reached For Required Divestiture Of Former Case IH U.K. Tractor Plant

RACINE, Wis. — CNH Global announced that its previously announced agreement to sell the company's tractor manufacturing plant in Doncaster, England, to Landini, S.p.A. has been approved by the European Commission and the transaction is expected to be completed within the next 30 days.

This action completes the regulatory divestiture requirements by the European Commission and the U.S. Department of Justice as a condition of government approval for the business merger between Case Corporation and New Holland, N.V.

For Case IH in the North American market, terms of the sale provide an uninterrupted supply of the Case IH-branded C, CX, and MXc low- to mid-range horsepower tractors and parts manufactured at the England plant. MX Maxxum tractors, which also are produced at the Doncaster facility, will continue to be made in Racine, Wis., for the North American market.

"Although our manufacturing facility has changed hands, this agreement ensures that Case IH dealers and customers will continue to have access to industry-leading Case IH brand C, CX and MXc tractor lines and the parts to support them," said Jim Irwin, vice president of the Case IH North American Agriculture Business. "Our actions are consistent with our commitment to provide Case IH customers with a complete product line designed to enhance their productivity and success. Case IH customers will continue to have access to the quality products and choices that they have come to expect."

As a result of the mandated divestiture, Landini will have a sublicense agreement allowing Landini to produce a differentiated line of the current mid-horsepower range of tractors made at the Doncaster plant and sold through its own distribution network and will own rights to the McCormick brand name.

Dekalb Choice Genetics Set To Make Advancements In Swine Genetics

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Dekalb Choice Genetics, a subsidiary of Monsanto Company, achieved a significant scientific breakthrough, announcing the construction of a physical map covering the entire swine genome.

This is the first time this level of genetic information has been mapped for the whole genome of a livestock species.

This physical map was generated in collaboration with Incyte Genomics. When used with the extensive core genomic technologies assembled by Monsanto, this physical map will enable researchers to advance genetic progress in traditional swine breeding at a rapid rate.

"Comprehensive genomics tools, and information, such as this physical map, will enable us and our research collaborators to take traditional breeding programs to the next level, said Dr. Tom Kasser, Dekalb Choice Genetics general manager. "Swine producers and their customers will benefit from this multi-million dollar investment, as we are able to deliver economically important genetic improvements in animal performance, health, and meat quality at an accelerated rate."

A genome map of this type enables scientists to take specific sections of DNA and study them in great detail, determining how variation in that DNA contributes to differences in animal performance. For any animal species, the majority of DNA sequence is identical; however, small differences in DNA sequence between individual animals can be responsible for important characteristic differences.

"This map provides an important new resource for locating DNA markers closely linked to genes that control valuable quantitative traits, such as meat quality and litter size," said Dr. Rodger Johnson, animal science professor, University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Dekalb Choice Genetics focuses its product development on key traits using a combination of quantitative and genomics. The swine genome physical map aids in this process by assisting scientists in the identification of genes and genetic markers already present in swine.

Extension Volunteers Honored

YOUNGSVILLE (Warren Co.) — At the recent annual meeting of the Penn State Warren County Cooperative Extension and Warren County Conservation District, several outstanding volunteers were honored with awards.

Those who were honored included Dolores Timco of Tidioute, who received the 4-H Natural Resources Volunteer of Distinction Award; William Blumquist of Warren, who received the Volunteer of Extension Award; and Paul Brohn of Warren, who received the Outstanding Forest Resources Professional Award of Distinction.

Dolores Timco has been a leader of a small but high-achieving 4-H club in Tidioute. She has managed to transfer enthusiasm, knowledge, and life skills to the youth of her entomology club through many venues over the years.

The young 4-H'ers have blossomed into leaders by planning, exhibiting, and conducting programs locally and around the state. They have participated in the "Bug Fest" in Tidioute, the "Great Insect Fair" at Penn State, and Ag Progress Days.

Club members were the first 4-H members in the state to complete more than four years of insect projects and assisted in developing local and state competition criteria up to the eighth year. Timco plays an important role in shaping the youth involved in her club. She has mentored young 4-H'ers to make wise career choices. She has also served as a 4-H team coach for the National Wildlife Competition in Texas.

Bill Blumquist has been an active volunteer in the cooperative extension office since he completed the Master Gardener training in 1999. Since then, Blumquist has volunteered more than 100 hours in support of the extension office and the Master Gardener program.

Some of the activities Blumquist has performed include speaking to the Warren Senior Center, conducting plant propagation programs with students at Warren junior and senior high schools, and constructed a greenhouse near the extension office.

This past fall, Blumquist became the county coordinator for the Penn State and DEP backyard compost program. He helped to train other Master Gardeners and conduct eight compost workshops reaching about 150 people in Warren County.

He hauled composters, a large display, and other materials to each meeting site. He also volunteered his time and equipment to take pictures at the 4-H Mall event, "Explore the Wild" day camp, and many Master Gardener programs.

Paul Brohn retired from his Forest Service career as a public information officer, but in 1992 he returned to full time public service as a forestry program assistant with Penn State Cooperative Extension and the Forest Stewardship Program. Since that time he has worked both part-time as well as full time. He first started with extension as a volunteer in the Forest Stewardship Program. He completed 40 hours of training and has volunteered countless hours since then.

Brohn's mission is to help private forest landowners and the community to understand, appreciate, and make wise decisions about forest land. The Outstanding Forest Resources Award of Distinction was presented to Brohn from Penn State's School of Forest Resources. This is the first of what is to be an annual recognition that will be modeled after Brohn's work.

Warren County Extension Director Jim Cowden was presented a Nittany Lion statute for receiving the National Association of County Agricultural Agents Distinguished Service Award. Cowden was only one of two extension agents from Pennsylvania who received this award in Jackson, Miss. last year. The Distinguished Service Award is the highest honor bestowed on extension agents across the country.

All the award winners received special citations for their accomplishments from State Senator Joe Scarnati and State Representative Jim Lynch.

Some of the directors on the extension board were presented certificates for completing terms of service. Those completing four year terms were Dolores Timco of Tidioute and Sue Gluvna of Columbus. Two-year terms were completed by Pat Evans of Warren and Jack Angove of Russell.

Anyone wanting more information concerning the educational programs of the Warren County Cooperative Extension should contact the office at 609 Rouse Avenue in Youngsville, telephone: (814) 563-9388, or e-mail: warrenext@psu.edu.

HOLD ON TO MORE HIGH-PROTEIN LEAVES WITH THE CENTER-LINE DESIGN.
MODELS 8520 AND 8545 IN STOCK - SMALL 14X18 BALES...BIG CASE IH QUALITY

From the smallest 8520 to the medium-duty 8530 and the deluxe 8545, Case IH offers you three choices in the 14x18 in (36x46 cm) bale category

All models boast the advantages of a center-line design. It's a difference you'll quickly see in consistent bale quality as you get bale after bale of solid, stackable, tied-to-last bales.

These three models of balers get the job done right with wide, low-profile pickups, high-speed, short-stroke plungers, constant-velocity drivelines, and reliable knotters and twisters. A big-capacity twine box boosts productivity, while a standard bale counter tracks the day's progress

Optional features include: hydraulic density control, high-flotation tires, hydraulic pickup lift, wire tie version of the 8545, light kit for night baling, quarter-turn bale chute, the 8511 Bale Thrower, and a bale chute extension with wagon hitch See your Case IH dealer for full details

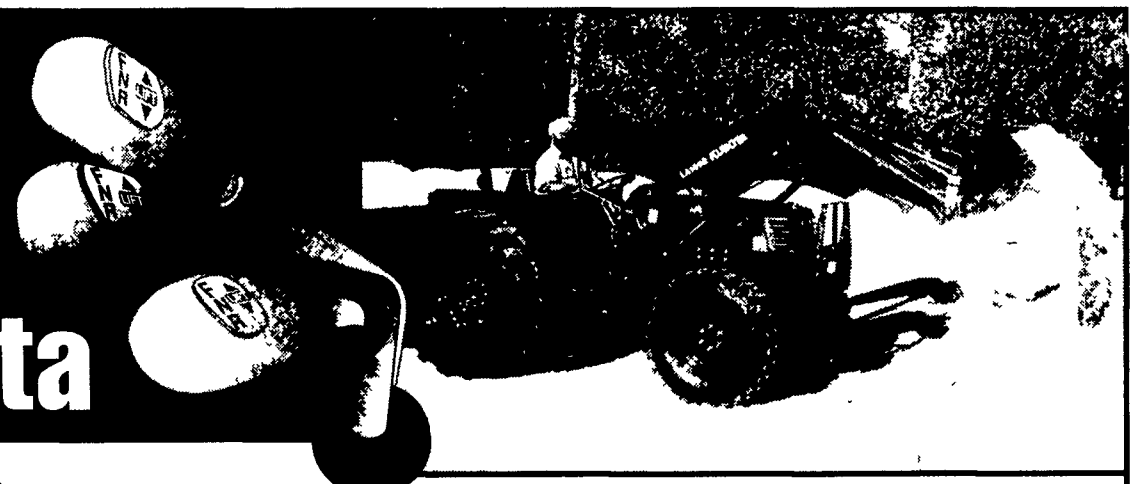
Shift Into High Gear With Kubota



The new Kubota M5700 tractor from Hoober is equipped with a Hydraulic Shuttle Transmission with Hydraulic Wet Clutch that allows you to shift between forward and reverse smoothly and quickly, without the need to depress the clutch pedal. This transmission gives you a range of 8F/8R, and an optional creep speed kit is available which makes it 12F/12R.

The Hydraulic Wet Clutch allows a steady stream of filtered hydraulic oil to circulate through it whenever it is engaged to keep clutch discs and plates cool while reducing friction. This system greatly increases productivity, especially in loader applications.

These tractors also come equipped with a 3 point hitch, live independent Hydraulic PTO and hydrostatic power steering which makes them ideal for loader applications on the farm, ranch, construction site, dairy, and golf course.

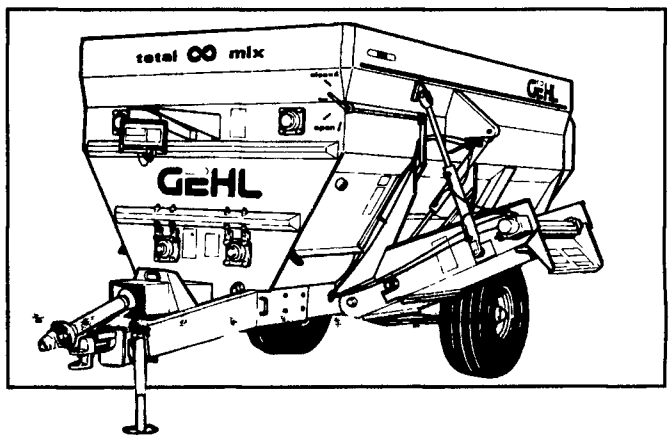
GEHL
YOUR LIVESTOCK IMPLEMENT LINE

TMR "Total Mix" Mixer Feeders



"Total Mix" TMR mixer feeders let you mix more long-stemmed hay into your ration - up to 30% by weight depending on hay type and moisture content.

- "Hay - slicer auger" - Incorporates knife assemblies into the two bottom augers.
- Better mixing action - Four-auger design creates a double figure - 8 mixing pattern for fast and complete mixing of all feed ingredients.
- Energy efficient - Planetary drive system requires less horsepower.
- Built to last - Patented star couplers absorb shock loads by allowing the bottom augers to flex, providing long service life.
- Five sizes - 150 to 455 cubic feet capacities.

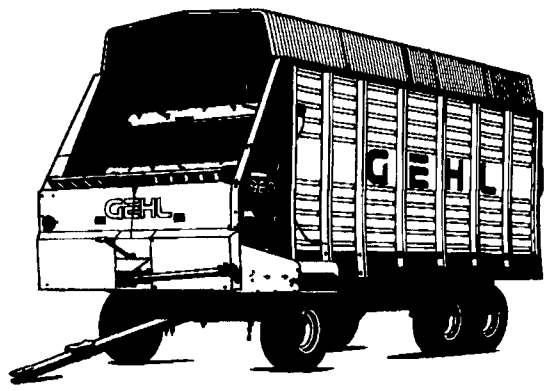
YOUR BEST FORAGE BOX VALUE



Gehl's new BU980 Self-unloading forage box has been redesigned for improved performance and durability.
Features include:

- True variable-speed drive for infinite unloading speeds.
- Single lever control.
- Improved beater design.
- Stronger drive chain and reinforced roof.
- Standard highway light package.
- Optional folding 18-inch conveyor extension.

New Proteus™ High-Energy Dairy Feed Gives You Lots of Valuable Options.

If you want to raise the income potential of your dairy herd, just ask us for new Proteus™ milking ration from Purina®

Proteus reduces cows' crude protein intake while maintaining high production, which can lower your protein costs. Or, depending on what you feed now, new Proteus is an economical way to switch to a higher-energy ration to make more milk.

Proteus is better than bypass proteins and also lowers cows' uninary nitrogen output. So call us today, and turn to Proteus.

Pa. FFA Officers Train Throughout Year

on golf carts serving refreshments to the golfers. After dinner, provided by Hoss's Steak and Sea House, the state officers helped with an auction that benefited the Pennsylvania FFA Foundation.

From July 31-Aug. 3, the team attended the National Leadership Conference for State Officers (NLCSO), Windsor, N.J. The conference was conducted by national FFA officers Joe Shultz and Carol Spruill. There, the team prepared for the year ahead of them, gaining more knowledge that would help throughout the year with conferences and chapter visits.

On an FFA chapter visit, students participate in the building block activity.

On Aug. 15-17, the state officers attended Ag Progress Days in Rocksprings. The team's display was entitled "Racing into the Millennium," was geared more toward elementary age children, with its racetrack, and cars they could write their name on and hang up. The state officers also showed off their food service skills at the Pennsylvania FFA Foundation food booth. There they served Hatfield pork products to the general public.

On Sept. 15-17, the state officers, along with a bus full of Pennsylvania FFA members, attended the Big E in West Springfield, Mass. The members competed in various Career Development Events, or CDEs, while the state officer team helped to conduct the various contests. The contestants were given their awards at a recognition banquet.

Three of the state officers were asked to participate in opening and closing ceremonies with state officers from other states. Tony Resh, Mike Livingston, and Lisa Allen were chosen to serve as treasurer, invocator, and reporter, respectively.

Many Pennsylvania FFA members came away with awards and Pennsylvania came away with the Sweepstakes Award for having their members earn the most points in competition.

On Oct. 6 the team helped to conduct tours at Farm City Day in the Pennsylvania Farm Show Complex during the Keystone International Livestock Expo (KILE) livestock show. Farm City Day gives inner-city elementary school students a chance to see livestock and agriculture-related activities that they would not normally come in contact with. The state officers led tours through the complex highlighting the different animals and products that might come from them.

On Oct. 17 the state officers traveled to the Penn Stater in State College for the annual Fall Conference for Leadership and Professional Development or FCLPD. There the team conducted workshops for chapter officers and mingled with the members during lunch.

Oct. 21-29 the state officers traveled to the national convention. This year was the first year that the team made their way down by van. On the way down, the team stopped in Columbus, Ohio for the All American Quarter Horse Congress and at Mammoth Cave in Kentucky. During their trip, the team attended awards breakfasts, sessions, workshops, tours, committee meetings, dinners, and manned the Pennsylvania FFA Booth. It was a whirlwind week of activities for the state officers, but it was very enjoyable.

During the fall and winter, the state officers conducted many chapter visits and area leadership conferences. The highlight of winter was the 72nd Annual Mid-Winter Convention Jan. 8 in the large arena at the Farm Show Complex. This year's theme, "Discover the Power," was a central part of the convention. Two hundred and twenty-four FFA members were presented with their Keystone Degree, four state stars were named, and many other awards were presented.

Streamside Forests Provide Profits, Protect Water

COLUMBUS, Ohio — If managed properly, streamside forests can be harvested for timber and contribute to healthy waterways, said Kathy Smith, Ohio State University extension associate in forestry.

"You just have to be more conscience of where you are and what you're doing when cutting timber," Smith said. "Take actions that create a lighter footprint on the area."

Forested corridors along streams, rivers and lakes help prevent water pollution. They also can yield a variety of timber products that may provide income for a landowner.

"The areas along streams often have very good soils, so oaks, walnuts and other high-value timber trees will grow very well in these areas," Smith said. "Corridors like this can also produce other types of wood that small custom markets would like."

The dollar value of trees from these areas can vary greatly. Areas with little or no management are less likely to produce high-value products than those where some management has taken place, she said.

Special forest products such as maple syrup or trees grown for commercial nut production also may be grown in areas along streams and rivers. Which type of tree would be best to grow depends on location, soil type and the market options that are available, Smith said.

But, all forest management decisions need to keep the health of the stream system in mind. Forests protect water quality by stabilizing banks, shading the water, and filtering nutrients, sediment and pollutants from water running off nearby land. The nutrients are used for tree growth, while some pollutants are trapped or broken down into harmless compounds, said Leslie Zucker, Ohio Sate University Extension associate for riparian systems.

"The extensive network of tree roots holds the soils of the bank in place, reducing erosion and keeping the stream banks and shoreline stable," Zucker said. 'The shade from trees helps reduce water temperatures. Cooler water contains a higher concentration of dissolved oxygen, which benefits many types of aquatic wildlife."

Forested areas also provide habitat for terrestrial animals and reduce the potential for flooding downstream by absorbing more storm runoff before it reaches the stream or river.

Trees can be harvested from a waterside forest area without disturbing water quality if guidelines or Best Management Practices (BMPs) are followed. Smith and Zucker offer these rules of thumb for streamside forest management.

1. If a tree casts shade on the water, leave it. Only remove trees that are at great risk of falling into the water. Trees with root systems more than 50 percent undercut by the stream are the only "leaners" that should be considered for removal.

2. Maintain at least a 50-foot wide strip of waterside forest area. A 50-foot wide forest corridor on slopes of four percent or less can filter out the majority of pollutants before they reach the water body. Slopes greater than four percent require wider forest corridors.

3. Single-tree selection harvesting is the only cutting method that should be used. In selection cutting, individual trees are removed based upon their current health, future health and future contribution to forest. Enough trees should be retained to maintain water quality functions. To prevent bank erosion, a 25-foot no-cut or light-cut zone should be measured from the top of the stream bank.

4. Avoid creating roads for equipment in the watershed forest and avoid running equipment in a stream bed. Remove harvested trees by cable and winch to minimize the number of roads needed and disturbance to the site. Heavy equipment can compact the soil and expose it to erosion. Equipment in the stream bed adds mud to the water and destroys wildlife habitat.

5. If a stream must be crossed in a harvest operation, use a bridge. Use a temporary, portable bridge or find another access to the timber on the other side of the stream.

6. If you use forest management chemicals, carefully follow the label instructions. Make sure the chemical is not sprayed on the water and, most of all, be sure the chemical is labeled for the intended use.

7. File an Operation and Management Plan with the local Soil and Water Conservation District (SWCD). This plan helps both the logger and the landowner understand how the harvest will be done and the BMP's that will be used.

8. Use a written contract when selling timber or using vendors of forestry services. The contract should clearly state the responsibilities of each party, which tree are to be harvested, what equipment may or may not be used, the requirement to use BMP's, and other job specifications.

For more information on managing streamside forests for profit and clean water, contact local offices of Ohio State University Extension, the Ohio Department of Natural Recourses — Division of Forestry, private forestry consultants or industry foresters. An Ohio Sate University Extension flyer titled You Can Manage Streamside Forests For Profits — and Clean Water is available at Extension offices.

Farm Bureau Supports Ridge's Plan

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — The Pennsylvania Farm Bureau is supportive of Gov. Ridge's spending plan for agriculture in the coming fiscal year.

The spending plan was contained in his recently unveiled state budget proposal for fiscal year 2001-2002.

"We're happy to see that the governor's budget proposal includes a nice increase for the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, the primary agency serving that state's number one industry," said Guy Donaldson, president of the statewide farm organization.

The Agriculture Department's general operating budget would be increased from $28.6 million to $31.6 million under the governor's recommendation.

Proposed increases for research at the Ag Department, from $3.5 million to $3.6 million, and for the budget of the Animal Health and Diagnostic Commission, from $4.1 million to $4.2 million, are also commendable. "Agricultural research and the Animal Health Commission's efforts to fight animal disease are vital to the future profitability of agriculture in this state," Donaldson said.

Also receiving approval from Farm Bureau were the governor's plans to boost spending for the School of Veterinary Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania — from $34.8 million to $35.8 million — and for the Ag Loan Forgiveness program from $238,000 to $284,000.

"The Vet School is Pennsylvania's only school for veterinarians," Donaldson said, "and the Ag Loan Forgiveness program is designed to keep agricultural college graduates from leaving the state."

Farm Bureau does have a concern over the governor's budget related to spending plans for research and cooperative extension at Penn State. Both line items are scheduled to receive a three percent increase in the budget proposal.

"That's not enough," said Donaldson. "It will take a six percent increase for both of these programs to stay even with what they're already doing. We are advocating a 10 percent funding increase for both programs. Research is important for making the necessary improvements in agriculture to stay competitive in the 21st century. Cooperative extension helps link farmers to the information and expertise needed to operate efficiently and soundly in today's world."

Farm Bureau also supports further decreases in the state's inheritance tax rate which was not included in the budget proposal. Legislation last year decreased the tax rate by 1.5 percent to 4.5 percent on inheritance to children, parents or grandparents.

"The state inheritance tax is a disruptive burden when it comes time to pass the family farm on to the next generation," said Donaldson, "We want to see another 1.5 percent cut in this tax."

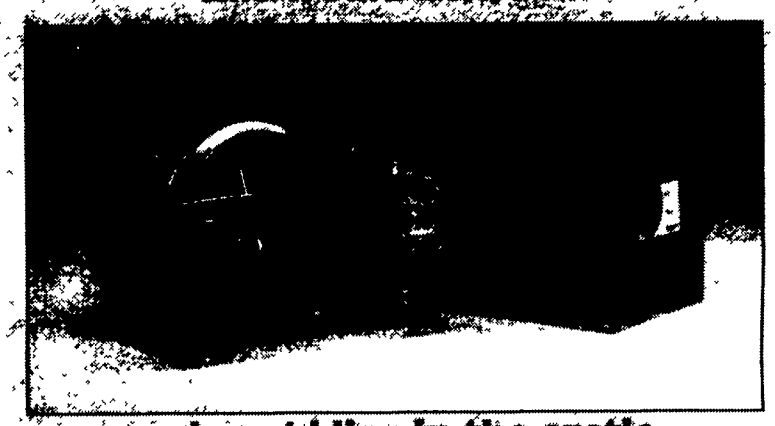
Cooling more efficient than this would be free...



and you'd live in the arctic.

The most energy-efficient cooling system in the world (excluding the Arctic Circle) can be found in the HiPerForm® Energy Star® refrigeration unit by Mueller®.

The HiPerForm refrigeration process is a proprietary system that floods the entire cooler evaporator using a subcooled liquid refrigerant that keeps your refrigeration at peak efficiency.

The HiPerForm system enables the compressor to operate at cooler temperatures, resulting in longer compressor life, less maintenance, and less energy consumption.

Until you move your operation north, you won't find a more efficient means of cooling your milk.

Mueller is cool.

Workshop Offers CRP Information, Opportunities

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) has been substantially enhanced since its creation, said Jerry Iles, watershed agent at the south district office of Ohio State University Extension.

"More land is eligible for CRP now than when it was initially created," Iles said. "Now nearly any land that borders a stream or river and could be enhanced by having a buffer strip or some other form of best management practice put in may be eligible."

Farmers, other landowners, watershed planners and natural resource professionals who would like to learn more about CRP should attend a Conservation Reserve Program Workshop scheduled Thursday, Feb. 22, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Ohio State University Extension's South District office in Jackson.

Anyone who owns or farms acreage along streams, rivers, or lakes should consider attending, Iles said.

"CRP is constantly changing and this is a way for people to get up-to-date and learn more about the program in general," he said. "Participants will learn the details of CRP such as eligibility requirements, incentive payments, fencing cost share opportunities, water source development and more."

The Conservation Reserve Program is a federal program established under the Food Security Act of 1985 to assist private landowners in converting highly erodible cropland to vegetative cover for 10 years. Since its creation, it has been expanded to include more land and offer longer-term contracts.

Under the current program, enrolled land must be highly erodible, contribute to a serious water quality program, or provide substantial environmental benefits if devoted to certain specific conservation uses. In return for voluntarily retiring environmentally sensitive cropland, landowners receive rental payments from the USDA.

In Ohio, there are about 280,000 acres of land enrolled in CRP and receiving an average annual rental payment of $76.73 per acre. Nationwide, the program pays an average of $4,833 per farm and $45.17 per acre on more than 462,855 contracts and 293,857 farms. There are nearly 30 million acres enrolled in CRP.

"The program is administered by the USDA's Farm Service Agency and is the federal government's single largest environmental improvement program on private lands," Iles said. "It is a unique way of forming conservation partnerships between landowners and government by using cash incentives for landowners to use best management practices."

Through the program, USDA shares the cost of establishing approved conservation practices. For example, it will help pay to install fencing and alternate water sources to keep cattle out of a stream, Iles said. It also will help pay to plant grass or forested buffer strips along streams. Buffer strips stabilize stream banks, shade water, enhance wildlife habitat, and absorb nutrient and other runoff from fields before it reaches the waterway.

The featured speaker at the workshop will be Robert Cole, chief agricultural program specialist for conservation and price support programs for the U.S. Farm Service Agency. Cole has a vast knowledge of CRP and is ultimately the person who answers questions and interprets the specifics of the program, Iles said. Cole will give an overview of CRP and the related Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program (CREP).

Other topics planned for the workshop are an overview of the benefits of streamside forests, the Lake Erie Buffer Initiative, Lake Erie CREP, eligibility requirements and county soils comparison, Natural Resource Conservation Service technical requirements and assistance, and conservation impacts of grazing lands.

Participants also may find helpful a scheduled panel discussion between farmers currently enrolled in CRP, Iles said.

"It clears up a lot of misconceptions when you actually have local people participate in a panel and share their experiences," he said.

Registration for the Conservation Reserve Program Workshop is $12 and includes lunch. Preregistration is preferred but not required.

For registration or more information about the CRP Workshop, those interested should contact Iles at Extension's South District office, (740) 286-2177, or e-mail Iles.9@osu.edu.

FFA: Amazing Power Within

There is an amazing power within each and every high school student. A student's success is simply a matter of finding that power and putting it to work.

The National FFA is a proactive organization that encourages and assists students in discovering the power they possess. Agricultural education, a supervised agricultural experience and FFA form a solid foundation for students to develop leadership skills, global agricultural knowledge and practical experience needed to succeed in their careers and everyday life.

National FFA Adviser Dr. Larry D. Case said, "FFA takes classroom knowledge and brings it to life and provides many opportunities for members to develop self-confidence, leadership skills and positive values."

From this proud heritage, many people are surprised to discover there are more than 350 careers in the business, science and industry of agriculture. FFA members, from urban, suburban and rural areas, are preparing for careers in such diverse fields as genetic engineering, marketing, law and communications. The number of agriculture positions is anticipated to expand as countries depend more on the United States for their food, fiber and natural resources requirements.

FFA members from the United States, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands will organize events and activities to build awareness of agricultural education and support during National FFA Week, Feb. 17-24. National FFA Week is conducted each year during the week of George Washington's birthday to recognize his leadership and commitment to American agriculture.

Financial support for National FFA Week promotional materials is provided by Case Corporation as a special project of the National FFA Foundation.

This year's theme, "FFA-Discover the Power," illustrates how FFA's programs allow students the opportunity to apply classroom information to real-life situations. Even if students decide not to pursue one of the hundreds of agricultural careers, they benefit from public speaking skills, career experience and leadership skills gained from the FFA.

FFA is a national organization of 453,902 members preparing for leadership and careers in the science, business, and technology of agriculture. Local, state and national programs provide opportunities for students to apply knowledge and skills learned in the classroom.

The organization has 7,220 local chapters located throughout the United States, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands.

FFA's mission is to make a positive difference in the lives of students by developing their potential for premier leadership personal growth and career success through agricultural education.

National FFA online, www.ffa.org, FFA's internet website, can provide information about the National FFA.

2001 Keystone Kontest

Winning Essay
by Elveita I. Kuhn
New Oxford FFA
New Oxford High School

FFA has taught me leadership, responsibility, and has given me a chance to grow in personality. FFA has also given me the opportunity to travel and meet people. Through FFA, I have been able to find my true personality and have been given the opportunity to work to improve myself and my personality.

When I joined FFA, I saw leadership as a quality to develop. I have learned to become a leader by giving ideas and advice or taking charge during a chapter meeting, county event, or a conference. While being in the FFA there are so many things that I have done to become a leader, like taking part in a community service event or becoming a chairperson of a committee. Another way to becoming a good leader is to give or take suggestions freely. With being a leader and learning leadership, I gained responsibility.

When I became a member of the FFA, I immediately became involved in chapter and county activities. When I started to involve myself in these activities and chapter events, I learned responsibility. Responsibility is an important quality to have, because I was a representative of my chapter. Being responsible is a life lesson that should never be forgotten.

Another thing that I gained as an FFA member was the chance to grow in personality. Since joining the FFA, I have gone on many trips and events (PDFS, SLLC, State Activities Week, and National Convention.) Through participation in these events, I have learned a lot of things about teamwork. To become a success as an FFA member, I had to meet new people. As I met new people, I learned that personality was a big part to dealing successfully with people. I grew in personality because when I entered the FFA as an eighth grader, I was shy and was afraid to talk in front of groups. As I got older and continued my membership through high school, my personality and speaking ability grew so much. Now I am never afraid to get up in front of groups of people to talk. As a younger member, I was never one to have self-confidence. But, when I started to do other activities, such as public speaking, county contests, and starting new community projects, which may or may not have been successful, I gained self-confidence.

Having the chance to earn the Keystone Degree has been such an honor. As I grew in the FFA, I always wanted to some day earn the state degree. I have won many chapter awards such as, star greenhand, star chapter farmer, and many chapter proficiencies. I worked so hard to win these awards, and I have worked just as hard to earn the Keystone Degree. Now that this time has come it means so much. I feel earning this degree will have a great impact on my life because my big plan is to run for a state office. If I would some day get a state office that would be another great experience.

Participating in the FFA has benefited me so much in several important ways teaching me leadership, responsibility, and giving me a chance to grow in personality. The FFA has truly been a positive experience in my life. I am sure that earning the Keystone Degree and continuing as an FFA member will be a life long experience that I will never forget.

Discover The Power: National FFA Week Feb. 17-24

The young people of the 21st century are constantly on the go, with classes and homework, after-school activities, part time jobs, friends and family. It's hard for them to find the opportunity to look inside their hearts and encounter the high-caliber strength that resides there. FFA membership provides students many opportunities to tap into their own personal power in a variety of ways.

FFA membership offers young people numerous opportunities to cultivate their innate potential. Leadership experience and community awareness are gained when students give speeches at public events and elect their own officers. Mentoring programs and national meetings foster responsibility and self-confidence. Supervised Agricultural Experience (SAE) programs motivate students by providing-real world professional experience. All of these qualities combine into a core of self-esteem and pride that forms the foundation of a student's inner power.

Students who have taken advantage of opportunities within FFA are better prepared for a future in the dynamic agricultural industry, which now encompasses more than 300 careers. They're also better prepared to deal with our changing world, as technology brings different cultures closer together each day. These changes present new challenges for the new century — and new tools will be needed to meet those challenges. FFA membership gives students an advantage by exposing them to international cultures, global agriculture and emerging technologies. By equipping these students with the proper tools, FFA membership instills a power that will remain with them for life.

More than 450,000 young men and women have taken a step toward realizing their own power by joining FFA.
